Navy Orders 45 Warships at Cost Of $500,000,000

150,000 Defense Workers Will Be Trained at Once For Key Industries

Swift weaving of the Nation's new defense fabric was accelerated still more yesterday as the Navy let contracts for 45 new warships and the Defense Commission announced immediate training of 150,000 workers for key industries.

The Navy's orders, involving about $500,000,000, were issued within two hours after President Roosevelt signed the Navy construction "speed-up" bill authorizing such contracts without competitive bidding.

New vessels of war to be built, in addition to several dozen previously contracted for, are 11 cruisers, 20 destroyers, 13 submarines and one large seaplane tender. Contracts for three aircraft carriers and two more cruisers are to be awarded shortly.

Take 50,000 From WPA

The National Defense Advisory Commission announcement said that training facilities immediately available will permit enrollment of 150,000 persons, of whom 50,000 will be taken directly from WPA rolls. The balance will be selected through State employment services cooperating with the Federal Employment Service, and from among workers already employed who wish to improve their skill. The program will be financed with $9,781,340 of WPA funds and $7,500,000 from the Office of Education.

The determined drive for adequate preparedness moved forward simultaneously in these added actions:

The R.F.C. set up the Rubber Reserves Co., and the Metal Reserves Co., each with a capital of $5,000,000, and the two institutions immediately announced agreements to buy 150,000 tons of rubber and 75,000 tons of tin for the defense reserve stocks.

Promotions were given 1,350 regular Army officers and the first of 9,000 reserve officers were called to active service for special training activities.

Announcement that a new $5,000,000,000 Army mechanization program was "in the works" was made by Louis Johnson, acting Secretary of War, after a meeting in the President's office attended by William S. Knudsen and Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff. Johnson said the new program will require another meeting of the same conferees with the President today.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to require registration with the Attorney General, with adequate information as to personnel, of all organizations subject to foreign control or engaging in "civilian military activity" designed to overthrow the Government. The House bill was sponsored by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, member of the Dies committee.

The bill is aimed particularly at the Communist Party, the Nazi bund and Fascist organizations.

Border Consulates

The State Department established five new consulates along the Canadian border for the convenience of Canadians living in their own country but working in the United States. Visas are now required by executive order aimed at "fifth column" elements. The new consulates will be at Fort Erie, Kingston, Sault Ste. Marie, all in Ontario Province; Sherbrooke, Quebec, and Trail, British Columbia.

The President signed a bill permitting the Maritime Commission

House Moves To Create New D.C. Police Unit

Bill to Set Up Special Force to Guard U. S. Buildings Approved

Creation of a police force of 900 armed men with powers similar to those of the Metropolitan Police to guard 130 Federally owned or rented buildings in the District is provided in a bill passed yesterday by the House.

Effect of the measure would be to give Washington, which already has three independent police establishments, a fourth force of uniformed officers second in size to the regular city police unit.

Converted by the bill into policemen with duties and authority equal to those of the Metropolitan and Park police would be the entire present force of the United States Building Guards. Action on the bill, introduced by Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, came as a detail of 20 experienced Metropolitan policemen began their first day of duty at the United States Capitol, augmenting a force of 136 Capitol Police, recently criticized as "inexperienced."

For the guards now on duty in Federal buildings, the bill, if finally enacted, will mean wholesale salary increases to bring their wages more nearly in line with those now paid members of the Metropolitan and Park forces. Present salaries now range from $1,200 for guard privates to $2,700 for inspectors. The bill authorizes salaries starting at $1,500 and going to a maximum of $4,000.

Increases authorized would add $197,920 to yearly expenditures for salaries. Members of the force also would be provided with uniforms and would be given special courses of training at an additional cost of $22,000 yearly. Positions would be subject to Civil Service examinations.

Profits Tax Bill May Pass This Session

Certain Approval Of 'Steeply Graded' Levy Seen Unless Congress Adjourns

By John B. Oakes,
Post Staff Writer

Spurred on by President Roosevelt's recommendation of "a steeply graduated excess profits tax," legislative leaders yesterday said that the levy would "unquestionably" be enacted this summer if Congress remains in session.

In an 89-word message that set something of a record for brevity, the President yesterday asked Congress to see that the burden of national defense expenditures is "equitably distributed according to ability to pay, so that a few do not gain from the sacrifices of the many."

The message was delivered on the very day that many of the new imposts in last month's tax bill took effect.

A Double Purpose

The excess profits tax levy would have the double purpose of helping pay for the defense program and holding down the growth of war-industry millionaires, it was indicated yesterday.

While both Chairman Harrison of the Senate Finance Committee and Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee thought the new tax would become law this year if Congress stayed in session, they predicted that hearings probably would not be held before the scheduled recess for the Democratic convention July 15.

However, they said that Treasury studies are being made on the problem of excess profits taxation at the present time. It was recalled that when the Senate-House conference committee rejected both war profits and excess profits amendments to the "defense tax" bill passed last month, a resolution was adopted requesting the Treasury to draft an excess profits bill this summer.

Message Follows Conference

President Roosevelt's message urging taxation was sent to Congress only a few hours after a conference at the Treasury between Secretary Morgenthau, Senator Harrison, Representative Doughton and tax experts. One of the conferees later said the discussions were to "steam up" the Treasury on the new bill.

"We are engaged in a great national effort to build up our national defenses to meet any and every potential attack," the President told Congress. "We are asking even our humblest citizens to contribute their mite.

"It is our duty to see that the burden is equitably distributed, according to ability to pay, so that a few do not gain from the sacrifices of the many.

War Tax Feature

"I, therefore, recommend to the Congress the enactment of a steeply graduated excess profits tax, to be applied to all individuals and all corporate organizations without discrimination."

It was thought possible in some quarters yesterday that the new excess profits tax bill—which, no matter when it is enacted, will certainly apply to this year's incomes—may contain some war tax features to go into effect on declaration of war.

As it passed the Senate last month, the "defense tax" bill included both an excess profits measure proposed by Senator LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and a war profits levy of Senator Connally (Democrat), of

Willkie Says Opponents 'Have Jitters'

Answers 'Smear' Attack by Again Daring Roosevelt To Seek Third Term

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

A denunciatory outburst from Democrats as Congress reassembled yesterday evoked from Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, only a dry comment and another challenge to the President to seek a third term.

In New York, Willkie hailed the first "smear" blast out of Washington with an expression of delight, and rejoined, "The boys down there have the jitters."

In Washington, Minority Leader Charles L. McNary listened in silence while Senator Pepper, Florida New Dealer, questioned Willkie's "national unity" appeal and hurled "Wall Street" and "blitzkrieg" charges at Willkie.

Willkie's running mate offered no comment on the Pepper onslaught, but immediately announced plans to campaign this fall in several States and on the radio. Decision of the liberal Oregonian to take an active role in the campaign was seen as a calculated offset to New Deal efforts to tie a "big business" tag to Willkie.

"Bring On Roosevelt"

Felicitations and regrets were in order as the Senate, in brief session, held a post-mortem on the Republican convention. Even while Pepper was blasting away at the G. O. P. ticket, McNary was receiving congratulations from both Democratic and Republican colleagues. Taft and Vandenberg, smiling in defeat, were receiving their handshakes.

Meanwhile, in New York, Willkie resigned his $75,000-a-year job as president of Commonwealth & Southern and prepared to cut loose from all other directorships and offices he holds in the system.

To "Wall Street" charges from Pepper and Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, he grinned:

"If I'm a Wall Street lawyer, Franklin D. Roosevelt's office is right across the street."

He said it made him feel "just wonderful" to hear New Deal criticism from Washington and urged his Democratic opponents to "bring on Roosevelt."

"I hope the Democratic convention nominates him for a third term, because Roosevelt is the man I want to meet and beat."

The Republican nominee invited leaders on all sides of the Philadelphia convention fight to help in his campaign. He enjoined against speculation whether John D. M. Hamilton will remain Republican national chairman, and announced immediate plans for a "vacation."

To Air Views in Elwood

No surface scars apparently remained after the sharp Philadelphia fight over the nomination. Willkie indicated Taft, Dewey, Gov. Stassen of Minnesota, and Gov. Baldwin of Connecticut, among others, will be invited to take active part in his campaign. He lunched with Stassen and talked with Dewey on the phone yesterday.

Willkie's platform views will be elaborated in his acceptance speech in Elwood, Ind., after the Democratic convention. McNary said he plans to accept the second place nomination at his farm near Salem,

Reich Delivers Bomber Fleet To Carol; Reds End Advance; 11 Britons Die in Daylight Raid

19 Victims Are Women, Children; German Attacks Last Through Day

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 1.—Striking with increasing boldness, German bombers today carried out the first daylight raids over Britain since the western offensive began with a series of daylong attacks.

The northeastern area of England was singled out for attention throughout the day and the northeast coast of Scotland, Wales and the southwest coast of England this evening and tonight.

Eleven people were reported killed and 20 more injured when heavy explosive bombs shattered a row of houses in a town on the northeast Scottish coast. At least 19 of the known casualties were women or children. These were the first of daylight bombing raids on land targets in Britain involving the loss of life in this war.

Bombers Over Wales

An official communique said another series of enemy aircraft crossed the southwest coast shortly before midnight. Bombs were dropped at Bristol in the Channel area. Four persons were injured, but there was little material damage, the air ministry said.

German raiders appeared over Wales this evening. Searchlights pried out a lone raider which had been driven back from the coast by defending fighters, but the airplane made off to the west. Some bombs were dropped along the coast, but the extent of the damage is not yet known.

Royal Air Force fighters shot down two raiders this evening, and two others in earlier German forays.

Twelve Nazi Planes Destroyed

London, July 1 (AP).—Germany and Britain swapped aerial punches again today, with British fliers reporting extensive bombings in Germany and the destruction of a dozen Nazi planes over France.

The spectacular aerial counterpunches came as Britain learned Germany had seized the undefended Channel islands, and that an unknown part of the French fleet has been saved for her by a doughty Gallic admiral. Britain meanwhile posted a "keep out" sign for all the world on French mandated territory in the Near East.

Vice Admiral Muselier was named to command "all free French naval forces." Gen. Charles de Gaulle, head of the French National Committee to continue the war, made the announcement here.

De Gaulle said there were "already several ships and air groups under his command," but their number and location were not disclosed.

Barbed Wire Rings Island

While the British told all comers occupation of the French mandates Syria and Lebanon would not be allowed, sweating British Tommies completed a ring of barbed wire entanglements around the British shore. There is a sentry on every beach and every pier head, alert for the Nazi invasion which England is

The War Today . . .

THE BALKAN PEACE Germany needs to safeguard her oil and grain supplies apparently hinges on whether Russia stops with occupation of Bessarabia and Bucovina; reports at Jassy (4) indicate the Red advance has halted, but Germany rushes delivery at Brasov (1) of bombers for Rumania.

RUMANIA, apparently, wins German support against Russia in return for concessions later to Hungary and Bulgaria and, renouncing Britain's guarantee, swings into Hitler's camp.

HUNGARY and Bulgaria, despite border clashes with Rumanians, notably at Visk (2), apparently are restrained from grabbing Transylvania and south Dobruja by Nazi promises of settlement later.

GERMANY, noting Russian advances at Herta (3) and Red control of the Danube mouth (5), nevertheless continues air raids on England, and occupies the Channel islands.

Nazis Occupy Channel Isles By Air Coup

Surprise Move Wins Reich First Foothold On British Soil

By the Associated Press

Berlin, July 1.—Germany claimed her first foothold on British soil tonight, occupying the Channel islands of Guernsey and Jersey in a surprise stroke by the air force.

The two pastoral islands in the English Channel, famed for their fine breeds of cattle, lie like stepping stones between the French coast—now in German hands—and Britain.

The high command gave little more than the bare announcement that they had been occupied, Guernsey on Sunday and Jersey today.

But its credit of a "coup de main" (surprise action) of the German air force hinted that troops had been landed on both islands by airplanes.

(London admitted "enemy landings have been made" on the islands and added that all communications to them were suspended. Western Union said this included also the islands of Alderney and Sark.

(Presumably the Channel islands were deemed indefensible by the British command. They previously had been declared demilitarized.

(The group's total area is about 75 square miles. The French-speaking inhabitants number about 150,000.)

An earlier communique reported a British cruiser of the Orion class was torpedoed south of the French port of Brest and credited one submarine with sinking 23,000 tons of enemy merchant shipping.

(The Orion is a 7,215-ton warship with a normal complement of 550.)

Eighteen British planes were shot down in a series of attacks against "nonmilitary targets in northern, western, southern Germany" Monday night, the high command added.

Rumanians, Magyars Clash At Frontier

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Budapest, July 1.—Tension between Hungary and Rumania increased today as the Hungarian government protested to Bucharest over border incidents in which three Hungarian civilians were reported to have been killed, and asked that the Rumanian troops be withdrawn from the immediate vicinity of the frontier.

A large number of Hungarian reservists were called to the colors and the country was mobilized in fact, though not in name. Limitations were put on civilian railroad travel and the sale of alcoholic beverages was forbidden for four days.

Behind the border incidents and the troop movements stands the Hungarian desire to regain from Rumania the province of Transylvania, lort after the World War, and possibly also a German decision that the time has come to halt the westward advance of the Red army.

Hungary will not move without tacit or open Axis support. Until now this support has been withheld because the Axis powers want southeastern Europe to produce and not to fight. But Rome and Berlin may become convinced—as most observers in this part of Europe are already—that the Russian advance will not end conclusively at the present demarcation lines.

Measures taken today by the Hungarian government and the attitude of the inspired press suggest that the leaders in the Wilhelmstrasse—where Axis policy is made—may

Bucharest Reports Clashes of Troops On Bulgarian, Hungarian Borders

By the Associated Press

Bucharest (Tuesday), July 2. A large fleet of German bombing planes arrived last night at the Brascov military airport, strengthening belief in diplomatic quarters that the Reich is backing Rumania in its stand to prevent Russia from making further advances.

The planes' arrival at the airport in the center of Rumania, at a corner of old Transylvania, also reinforced the belief that Germany feels assured of success in its attempt to bring a peaceful settlement of Hungarian and Bulgarian territorial claims on Rumania.

The possibility was seen that these two nations would cooperate in halting the Russian advance.

Task Accomplished, Says Soviet

[A communique issued by Tass, official Soviet news agency, implied that Moscow regards the occupation as complete. Red army men "have accomplished their task" along the entire length of the Prut and Danube rivers frontiers of Bessarabia, and have established themselves all along the demarcation lines, the agency said.]

Red army withdrawal from positions over the Prut River into Old Rumania was reported from Jassy, heavily armed, refugee-jammed provincial capital at the edge of Bessarabia.

Soviet sources had said the overstepping of the limits of ceded Bessarabia and northern Bucovina was only a misunderstanding, but it stirred fears in the Balkans that the Russian tide might sweep through southeastern Europe.

The army of occupation still commands bridges across the Prut, but many of these are mined on the Rumanian side. Rumanian troops stand ready to enforce their claim to the southwest bank.

The number of bombers reaching Brasov was not disclosed. Military observers said they were planes which had been purchased by Rumania, but delivery at this time was held to be highly significant.

Attacks on Two Borders

The government redoubled its defense preparations in Dobruja and Transylvania, in fear of imminent Hungarian and Bulgarian attacks if German pacification efforts should fail.

Incidents on the Hungarian and Bulgarian borders were held in some official circles to be forms of pressure intended to force Rumania to accept less attractive terms in mediation.

A confidential Rumanian diplomatic report issued Monday night said that apparently concerted Hungarian and Bulgarian attacks against Rumanian frontier posts occurred simultaneously Sunday night and Monday morning.

Without locating the scenes of attack, it said the Hungarian raid started at 10:55 p. m. Sunday and lasted until 1 a. m. Monday.

Turn Away From Britain

A number of frontier outposts were attacked with rifles, machine guns and even artillery, the report said, and there were a number of casualties on both sides.

During the same hours the Bulgarians were said to have attacked three Rumanian posts on the Dobruja frontier, where a number of casualties resulted.

The German bombing planes reached Brasov a few hours after the Rumanian cabinet had thrown out the old British guarantees of

President Names Brown to Complete Tariff Board Term

Fred H. Brown, who resigned as comptroller general ten days ago after a critical illness, was nominated by President Roosevelt to fill an unexpired term on the Tariff Commission expiring June 16, 1941. The nomination was sent to the Senate without comment.

A former Senator from New Hampshire, Brown was elected in the Democratic landslide of 1932 and was defeated at the end of his first term, in 1938, by Charles W. Tobey, Republican. He was appointed to a 15-year term as comptroller general March 30, 1939, and was confirmed by the Senate April 3 1939, the first Democrat to hold the post. Last December 14, he suffered a heart attack while leaving his automobile, at his office.

Once a ball player, the burly, florid Brown was an intimate of Vice President Garner in the Senate, though politically a down-the-line New Dealer. Before his entry into national politics he served as United States District Attorney and as Governor of New Hampshire and was for eight years a member of the State's Public Service Commission.

French Aide Here Shoots Self Over Fate of Homeland

Europe's war produced its first Washington casualty yesterday. The victim was a 51-year-old naval aide at the French Embassy, Jacques Parent, who was found unconscious yesterday in the basement floor of his home, a bullet wound in his mouth, a revolver in his hand and a note by his side.

His condition was said to be "very serious."

Miss Paulette Parent, his sister, withheld the note from police, but told them it satisfied her that her brother had attempted suicide. She was at home with her mother, at 2017 O street northwest, when the shot rang out.

Shell shocked in the World War, Parent was driven "into a neurotic condition" by reports of German boots trampling his native soil, Commander Pierre Benech, French naval attache, said yesterday.

Commander Benech said he was convinced that a contributory factor was Parent's ill health for some time.

Agents Hold Man, Woman

FBI Operatives Arrest Couple With Communist Papers

Copyright by New York Times

Jersey City, July 1.—Police and Federal Bureau of Investigation agents today were poring over a suitcase full of papers found in the possession of a man and a woman arrested here today.

The papers had to do with many phases of communistic activity.

The man was Rand Stevens, 41, and the woman was Ruth Freeman, 28, both of New York.

In the coupe in which they were arrested, police found four boxes containing .22 caliber cartridges, a canvas sack of the Rondout National Bank of Kingston, N. Y., and a black overnight case containing the literature which was of primary interest to investigators.

In part this consisted of a loose-leaf scrap book of about 100 pages into which had been pasted photographs clipped from newspapers and magazines of dams such as the Coulee and one in the TVA development in Tennessee; pictures of oil developments, radium fields, bridges and many other such things. There were also some 200 green cards, described as application cards for membership in the Communist Party.

These carried names and addresses of the applicants, the jobs at which they worked and the names of the employers, their signatures, the names of persons proposing them and penciled notations to "check Socialist connections."

Fears Freeing of Captives

Britain Sends Nazi Prisoners To Canada for Internment

By the Associated Press

Quebec, July 1.—Britain's prisoners of war, sent to the Western Hemisphere lest they be set free to fight by invading parachute troops or fifth columnists in England, are landing in Canada for internment.

The first motley shipload arrived over the week-end after a heavily guarded voyage on which one prisoner dived through a porthole and was lost at sea.

One ship's officer said the captive German army men gave little trouble but that the Nazi airmen "called us swine nearly every chance they got on the way over."

The number of prisoners was not disclosed.

Some prisoners were smiling and others were glowering as they stepped ashore. They carried varied personal belongings including tennis racquets, musical instruments and kitchen utensils. Some of them were interned enemy aliens.

"We slept about two nights in seven," a British officer said of the 250 British officers and soldiers who guarded the prisoners.

Some of the prisoners, who included Nazi land, sea and air forces, were kept on board their prison ship for debarkation at Montreal.

They marched through long lines of Canadian bayonets, hailing one another jocularly, and clasping hands as they recognized friends in other groups.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

WONDERWOMAN: Of course, the right, the inevitable choice for Vice President should have been the worthy Western lady who made a seconding speech in 50 words. But a republic always neglects its real heroines.

Harlan Miller

TEST OF CHARM: Of course, it might be an acid test of Wendell Willkie's charm to try to persuade Henry Ford—who has resisted the FDR charm and the charm of big Bill Knudsen—to make airplanes for someone Henry doesn't like.

* * * *

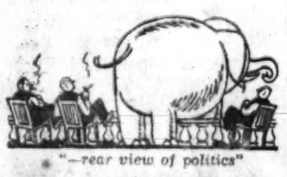
My skepticism about the new airport is vanishing: it begins to look as if planes might be able to land on it one of these days . . . But it will never give the thrill of landing amid the chimneys, towers and hangars of the present airport.

* * * *

SHOT IN THE ARM: My favorite Senator alleges that the sudden animation of the G. O. P. convention when Congressman Halleck put Willkie in nomination reminded him of a corpse sitting up in its coffin, of an appendicitis victim coming out of the ether.

* * * *

ORATORY SCHOOL: Incidentally, Halleck's dynamic speech proves that the House, with its limited 5 or 10 minute speeches and its noisy snores and rustling of newspapers, is a good training school for orators after all.



"—rear view of politics"

REAR VIEW: Somehow, one scene that seems permanently fixed in my mind is the weary delegates sitting on the second floor porch of Senator Taft's hotel behind the rear end of one of Mr. Taft's artificial elephants; some with their shoes off.

* * * *

MISSING SENTENCE: Politics being the nasty thing it is, it isn't likely the Democrats will let Mr. Halleck forget the unfinished sentence in his speech, the one which intimated that Willkie had no campaign fund. (Maybe they used slugs in his meter.)

* * * *

The more I look at the new Jefferson Memorial from all angles the more I wish it were a big civic auditorium or a municipal stadium . . . It doesn't as yet seem to offer even roller-skating possibilities for the kids.

* * * *

WHO SAID BOO? Seasoned observers who have attended many conventions swear that when they heard the boos during the nomination speech they thought they were at a Democratic convention and had to pinch themselves.

* * * *

SALES TALK: The somewhat exaggerated assertion by several ardent G. O. P. orators that the Democratic Party is the "war party" is reminiscent of the over-enthused salesman who asserted that a rival refrigerator burns up the food.

"—a waste of art"

PUFFED FACES: Among my more profound observations at the conventions, which the masterminds perhaps overlooked, is that it really does a candidate's prestige no good to have his face reproduced on inflated toy balloons. It's a waste of art; no man looks like a nation-saver on a toy balloon.

* * * *

Thousands of residents of Washington who'd drive all day to visit Alexandria if it were as far away as Williamsburg never go near this historic suburb from year to year . . . They can, of course, get the effect of distance by approaching it in a round-about way.

* * * *

WILL & NOX CAMPAIGN: One of the more delicate decisions that now remains to be made is whether the G. O. P.'s 1936 Vice Presidential nominee, appointed to a Democratic President's cabinet, will campaign for the G. O. P.'s 1940 nominee. And if he wants to, will they let him?

* * * *

POST MORTEM: A good hog-caller makes a topnotch delegate during a demonstration . . . Most pathetic figures at a convention are United States Senators who must listen to other people's oratory with no comeback. They're not used to that . . . It's a wise convention decorator who places pretty women in front row seats so delegates can rest their eyes . . . I wonder how many delegates were influenced by the balloons dropped from the sky-lights?

Age Security Law Fails, Says O'Mahoney

National Remedy Needed, Senator Tells Townsend Convention

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 1.—Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney, chairman of the temporary National Economic Committee, told the Townsend convention today that the present old-age security law is "clearly ineffective."

The Wyoming Democrat declared that the law was "unequal in its operation among the States" and was unfair because it was based on "the principle of need instead of age."

He said the studies of his so-called monopoly committee had "clearly demonstrated the folly of setting up an old-age assistance plan dependent upon the ability of the States to contribute to the pension fund."

His statement was cheered by the convention of followers of Dr. Francis E. Townsend, author of a plan to provide old-age pensions through a 2 per cent Federal gross income tax.

National Remedy Seen as Need

"The modern economic dislocation with which we have been struggling since 1929 is certainly not a local dislocation in any of its aspects," the Senator said.

"It is wholly national, and that is why it is altogether necesary to apply a national remedy. The States, as States, are incapable of curing it."

O'Mahoney said the "great obstacle to the establishment of a satisfactory system" of old-age pensions was the uncertainty among members of Congress with respect to a method of financing the payments.

"One thing is certain, however," he continued, "namely, that taxes are paid out of production. If we are to meet the challenge of our time, we shall first have to discover how to increase production and open the door of opportunity to all."

Convention Gave Him No Hope

Dr. Townsend, painting a bleak picture of the sweep of totalitarian power in Europe and Asia, told the convention today that his pension plan was "the key to America's salvation."

Townsend said he attended the Republican convention in Philadelphia and found "little realization or desire to face the realities—the problems of labor, the unemployed and the aged." He added that he expected "no higher degree of statesmanship or knowledge of our national peril" from the Democratic convention.

"Politicians, generally, no matter of what party, appear to live in a world which no longer exists," he said.

Texas—but both additions were knocked out in conference.

"We have a number of programs," Treasury Secretary Morgenthau said. Whenever the House Ways and Means Committee is ready for hearings, he added, "we'll be ready to give them what we have."

World War Levies Studied

Attention of tax-law drafters yesterday was centered on the levies used in the World War period.

From 1917 to 1921 the Government had an excess profits tax which produced more than $7,000,000,000 revenue in that time. The peak year was 1918, when the levy yielded $2,500,000,000.

The rate schedule ranged from 20 to 65 per cent of all corporation profits in excess of a computed "normal" profit.

The "normal" profit was figured in the first of these taxes, enacted late in 1917, by exempting $3,000 plus not more than a 9 per cent return on invested capital in a single year. After deduction of these credits, the excess profits tax ranged as high as 60 per cent on profits above a 33 per cent return on capital.

In 1918, the exempted "normal" profit was changed to a flat $3,000 plus 8 per cent of invested capital and the top tax rate was lifted to 65 per cent. After the war, the tax continued until 1921, but the rates were pared to a maximum of 40 per cent.

Senator LaFollette's plan would take 20 per cent of profits in excess of a flat $3,000 and an 8 per cent return on invested capital, with a top "take" of 40 per cent for the higher corporate incomes.

Also Scan Connally Plan

Preliminary guesses were that an excess profits tax would yield $300,000,000 to $600,000,000 a year revenue, but Treasury officials also were scanning the proposal by Senator Connally, which, it was estimated, would yield $8,000,000,000.

Experts yesterday were considering the idea of making Connally's plan a peace-time measure instead of just for use after declaration of war.

The World War schedule of excess profits levies was as follows:

Twenty per cent on net income (in excess of allowable deduction) of less than 15 per cent of the invested capital.

Twenty-five per cent on net income of less than 25 but more than 15 per cent of the invested capital.

Forty-five per cent on net incomes in excess of 25 per cent of the invested capital, but not more than 33 per cent of that figure.

Quits Presidency To Campaign For Presidency

Willkie Defies 'Smear' Attack, Challenges Roosevelt to Run

Oreg., "if they won't run over my trees."

"I will make a campaign in the fall," said McNary, setting at rest reports that he would take the same inactive role Garner has played in the last two Democratic contests. McNary said his campaign "will not be intensive," but he will visit several States and speak on the radio." Willkie, he said, as the nominee, "will do mots of the campaigning."

The Republican Vice Presidential nominee will renew his fight to hold Congress in session, and will remain here while it is sitting.

To Meet Here Soon

McNary revealed he will meet Willkie for the first time when he comes here to confer with him in the next few days. He said he is too busy in the Senate to go to New York to meet Willkie.

Gov. Charles A. Sprague of Oregon called McNary to say, "It would be in the best interest of Oregon if the Senator retained his seat and let the November election decide the issue," Sprague said in Salem.

The Democratic backfire from Washington which Willkie jovially compared with Philadelphia opposition statements that "got me more votes," came chiefly from Pepper in the Senate and Speaker Bankhead and Representative Doughton, in the House.

Bankhead called the Willkie-McNary ticket a "weird combination," but shut off debate in the House, where several Democrats were set with speeches. Doughton said Republicans didn't nominate a Republican because they didn't want one of their own number beaten."

Hints Plan of Campaign

In the Senate, Pepper indicated the direction the New Deal campaign attack may take by assailing Willkie's business connections and accusing him of Hitler "political blitzkrieg" methods.

Questioning Willkie's pledge to work for "national unity," Pepper said: "Does 'unity' mean the unity that Wall Street would impose on America by the adoption of their policies and principles? . . .

"If the Government cracks some recalcitrant industrialist, because he does not obey the Government's command, is he (Willkie) going to believe in a policy of unity that would appease that disgruntled man?"

He said that Willkie wanted unity "so that private enterprise can write the ticket instead of the Government telling private enterprise what to do." And he called on Willkie to "stand up and say I denounce Adolf Hitler and his policies."

While other G. O. P. candidates took the stump, Pepper said "The master of the political blitzkrieg remained comfortably under the awnings of Wall Street and took over control of the Republican Party from the inside, the way Wall Street is accustomed to take over another corporation, by negotiation and purchase."

Meanwhile, in the House, Speaker Bankhead began preparing his Democratic Convention keynote speech and predicted:

"The President will be nominated by the Democratic Convention whatever his personal inclination may be with reference to making the race. He will be elected President over Willkie."

Knox and Stimson Hearings Today

Senate Committee To Weigh President's Cabinet Appointments

A "double feature" in the Senate Office Building was scheduled for today, as both Military and Naval Affairs committees were preparing yesterday for separate hearings on the nominations of Col. Henry L. Stimson as Secretary of War and Col. Frank Knox as Secretary of the Navy.

After some doubt during the day, it was definitely decided late in the afternoon that the Stimson hearings, set for 10:30 a. m. in Room 357, would be open to the public.

On the other hand, the Knox inquiry, scheduled for the same hour in the Naval Affairs Committee room, is to begin as a closed session, but it is thought possible that the threat of Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, to reveal everything that transpires might induce the committee to throw open the doors.

Chairman Sheppard of the Military Affairs Committee said yesterday he had received no request to call Secretary of War Woodring to the stand. Soon after the President named Stimson to succeed Woodring, some Senators suggested that Woodring be queried by the committee as to the reasons for his resignation. Woodring has been represented as being more opposed to sending aid abroad than Stimson or Knox.

Legislation Signed To Expand Power Of Supreme Court

President Roosevelt signed legislation yesterday empowering the Supreme Court to regulate criminal procedure in Federal courts.

A statement issued by the White House, describing the legislation as a "far-reaching and important step in the reform of the law," said:

"It is hoped that this grant of power will result in introducing uniformity and simplicity in the administration of criminal justice in the Federal courts and eliminating some of the archaic technicalities which at times hamper or delay the progress of cases through the courts.

"In 1934, similar authority was conferred on the Supreme Court in respect to civil cases. The Supreme Court thereupon appointed an advisory committee of eminent members of the bench and bar and teachers of the law, which drafted a set of simple rules of procedure.

"With some modifications, these rules were adopted and promulgated by the Supreme Court. They have met with general acclaim and have made an important contribution to reducing law's delays and diminishing the cost of litigation.

"It is reasonable to expect a similar result in criminal cases from the legislation just enacted."

Turkey Expects Russian Demands Over Dardanelles

Istanbul, July 1 (U.P.)—Informed Turkish sources predicted tonight Russia soon would submit proposals to Turkey concerning control of the Aegan and Black seas and the strategic straits connecting them.

The government was represented as being confident it could reach an understanding with Moscow on the question of what fleets would be allowed future use of the Bosphorous and the Dardanelles.

Some qualified observers, however, were not so optimistic. They said Turkey might be forced to fight if the Russian terms should prove too stiff.

Hinckley Is Confirmed As Hopkins Assistant

The Senate confirmed yesterday the nomination of Robert H. Hinckley, of Utah, to be Assistant Secretary of Commerce, succeeding J. Monroe Johnson.

At the same time the Commerce Department regained control over commercial and private aviation.

The Federal Diary:

Lunch Counter Curb Disturbs Labor Staff

Employes Complain Ruling, in Effect, Bans Rest Periods

By Edward Ryan

Employe rest periods, long a favorite theme of Labor Department advice to private industry, have now popped up as a sizabe headache for officials in the department's Washington office.

Part of the headache is a ruling by Wage Hour Administrator Fleming which employes are saying should apply to the Labor Department as well as to private industry.

Employe plaint is that rest periods, in effect, have been taken away by an order of Secretary Perkins.

Official retort is that the privilege of resting had been flagrantly abused, that the new regulations keep reasonable privileges for the employes, and insure that a reasonable amount of work will be done.

Center of the controversy is the lunch counter, operated for employes of the Labor Department and the Interstate Commerce Commission, by the Welfare and Recreation Association. The lunch counter is in the same room with the cafeteria, but until a few days ago lunch counter and cafeteria operated on separate schedules.

The cafeteria served breakfasts, full meals for the lunch trade, and remained closed between meals. The counter, seling sandwiches, drinks, candy and other food knick-knacks, was open continuously from early morning until 3:30 p. m.

Two weks ago the schedules were shifted, effective June 24, to make the daily progrma:

Cafeteria—Breakfast from 7:45 a. m. to 8:45 a. m. each weekday; luncheon, 11:15 a. m. to 2 p. m., Monday through Friday,; 12:30 p. m. to 2 p. m. Saturday.

Lunch counter, 11:15 a. m. to 2 p. m., Monday through Friday, 12:30 p. m. to 2 p. m. Saturday.

These hours, officials said, were worked out together by personnel officers of both the Labor Department and the Interstate Commerce Commission, after a lengthy study of how much the lunch counter and cafeteria room were being used by employes during working hours.

The study, according to Robert Smith, Labor Department personnel director, showed facts like these:

Numerous supervisors in both agencies were complaining that employes idled long in the morning, longer in the afternoon around the lunch counter.

Profits from the lunch counter were carrying the overhead expense of the whole cafeteria.

At any one time during an afternoon, the number of employes sitting around the lunch counter varied up to 50 or 100.

Many employes were checking in to work at 9 a. m., then going down for breakfast; on Saturdays were eating lunch before quitting time.

The Secretary's order, published June 19, besides fixing the new schedule, pointed out that the statutory working hours were 7 a day, with a half-hour for lunch, plus 4 on Saturday. It added that department employes and division chiefs would schedule the lunch periods of their employes "so as best to meet the needs of their respective units."

Chiefs of the Labor Department local of the United Federal Workers protested the order, later circulated a petition against it. Main theme of their argument was this:

The Labor Department preaches rest periods for workers in private industry; the cafeteria was the only place in the building where employes could get away for a suitable rest period; closing the lunch counter in effect ended real rest periods.

Misuse of the cafeteria, union officials said, should be handled through ordinary administrative channels, without penalizing all employes for a few cases of "inefficiency or poor supervision."

Schools Plan Aid For Handicapped

Long-Range Program Includes Setting Up Two Special Schools

The future of "forgotten children" brightened somewhat yesterday as the Board of Education set up objectives for an extensive long range program for schooling handicapped youngsters.

It adopted a bulky report from its advisory committee on handicapped children, with a major recommendation the establishment of two central schools, white and colored, for such children.

How soon funds may be provided by Congress is problematical, but the new comprehensive program was said to represent a step forward.

Although problems of handicapped children have long been a concern of the board, "Washington is not doing what certain other cities have done," Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the board, said yesterday.

"But," she added, "this plan will help us to take care of these children as we should."

The advisory committee recommended that the board and the health department seek legislation for nine services for handicapped children, with supporting appropriations. They were:

Construction of the two central schools, with appropriations for sites, plans, specifications and buildings. An appended report showed that a site for the white school has been requested by the board every year from 1936 through 1940, and the same years (with the exception of one) for a colored school.

Special classes (for the blind and near-blind) in Braille instruction. That would enable some District pupils, now enrolled in the Maryland School for the Blind, to stay at home and continue their high school education.

Special classes for partially hearing children.

Special classes for cardiac cases.

Special instruction for shut-in handicapped children. Congress has provided $15,000 for such classes for this fiscal year.

A hearing conservation clinic in the public schools.

Complaining that colored schools received only 14 per cent of the school's appropriations for buildings in the 1941 budget, Col. West A. Hamilton, board member, yesterday introduced a resolution reaffirming the continuance of "the long-established principle of a fair and equitable division of funds."

Mrs. Doyle was reelected president of the board yesterday and Robert A. Maurer was renamed vice president. The meeting was the last for the summer.

Three members, Gratz E. Dunkum, Charles D. Drayton and John H. Wilson, were named as a committee to act in any protests on liquor licenses while the board is in recess.

Promotion of L. J. Cantrell as assistant superintendent in charge of junior high schools and vocational schools in Divisions 1-9 was made permanent yesterday.

Mrs. O. M. Walker's promotion as principal of Banneker Junior High School also became permanent.

Two new members were appointed to the board of examiners in Divisions 1-9 of the school system, Harry Baker, jr., principal of Langley Junior High School, and Miss K. F. Scrivener, administrative principal of Langdon School.

In division 10-13, the following new members were appointed to the board of examiners: Mrs. W. C. Burch, director, primary instruction, and Mrs. M. K. Brown, principal of Slater-Langston School.

Night school principals for the session starting in September were named for the following locations: Abbot, H. S. Whitesell; Central, Miss E. A. Hanft; Hine, H. R. Baker; McKinley, Mrs. C. E. Challice; Roosevelt, C. C. Knight; Western, K. J. Moser.

The board approved two elective courses for senior high schools, one in "National and World Problems" and the other a revision of an economic course.

Artie and Lana 'Off the Beam' Of Romance

ROMANCE STRIKES DISCORD—Lana Turner, film actress, disclosed in Hollywood yesterday that she has separated from Artie Shaw, the bandsman she married in an elopment last February. Artie said: "There's nothing to it . . . We were out together last night and are still living together." Lana, tearful, said she had moved out of their big Hollywood Hills home and had taken an apartment. The jitterbugs sum the whole thing up saying their romance is just "off the beam," not harmonious

U. S. Ship Returns to Hongkong, Adds Refugees of All Nations

By the Associated Press

Hongkong, (Tuesday), July 2.—The American liner President Coolidge left Hongkong last midnight, carrying hundreds of refugees of all nationalities, in addition to the normal passenger load.

Although the day brought no developments in the tense relations between Great Britain and Japan, British authorities proceeded with plans to remove 4,500 women and children by July 5. The British citizens are mostly families of service men.

The British subjects were bound for Australia via Manila.

The exodus from Hongkong is a precaution against possible Japanese blockade to enforce demands for British closing of the Burma route, over which China is said to obtain war supplies.

The Japanese consul general said "there is no cause to worry" and announced he was advising Japanese residents to remain.

However, Norwegian, French and Dutch consular officials ordered their nationals to leave and British officialdom hinted they feared possibility of Japanese army action without Tokyo's approval.

"We simply are taking precautions," said a British spokesman.

The President Coolidge was 100 miles out on the way to Manila when Washington ordered it to return to Hongkong to take aboard all Americans desiring to leave.

Hongkong bank withdrawals were reported heavy.

U. S. Stands Firm

Secretary of State Hull made it plain yesterday that the United States is standing firm in its insistence on maintenance of the status quo in the Pacific, despite the Japanese move for an "Asiatic Monroe Doctrine."

Asked at his press conference for comment on the declaration by Japanese Foreign Minister Arita regarding such a doctrine, the Secretary said he had frequently outlined the principles on which this Government believed that international relations should be based, and had nothing to add regarding Arita's statement. Hull has always contended that treaties covering the subject shall remain in effect unless changes are agreed to by all the parties to them.

Further indication that the United States does not intend to alter its position was seen in the fact that the American Fleet is remaining in the Pacific, despite widespread belief last week that it was en route to the Panama Canal and the Atlantic.

Law Provides Gravelly Point Concessions

Roosevelt Signs Bill Designed to Bring $250,000 a Year

President Roosevelt signed a bill yesterday which gives the Federal Government a chance to get back some—if not all—of the $12,500,000 it expects ultimately to spend on Washington's model airport at Gravelly Point.

Among other things, the new law gives the Civil Aeronautics Authority the power to lease concessions at the huge new air terminal which, it is estimated, will bring in an annual revenue of from $250,000 to $300,000.

Concessions to be leased include three large restaurants, equipment for which would cost the concessionaires an estimated $200,000, operation of gasoline and oil sale facilities for airlines and private flyers, rights to the airlines for use of portions of the terminal buildings and the landing area and options on hangars.

In addition, it was said, there will be the usual barber shop, drug store, newsstand and telegraph facilities associated with any large transport terminal.

When completed and ready to handle regularly scheduled air transportation, the National Airport, officials predict, will be the finest in the world. As such it is expected to be the city's main attraction for tourists.

In anticipation of large numbers of visitors, both Washingtonians and out-of-towners, the airport was designed with parking space for 5,000 automobiles, with additional space available for 3,000 cars if needed.

It is from visitors, in addition to airline patrons, that the Civil Aeronautics Authority expects to obtain, indirectly, the revenue with which to amortize the Federal investment. By renting concessions, it was pointed out, the Government not only obtains revenue but relieves itself of the necessity of providing additional capital needed for such things as restaurant equipment.

The landing field at the airport will be finished by September 1 and within 30 days will be in shape for emergency landings, officials predict. The terminal building and one hangar are expected to be finished early in November.

Ten Die in Texas Flood; Hundreds Flee in Arkansas

Hallettsville, Tex., July 1 (AP).—Flood waters swept down the Colorado, Guadalupe and Lavaca rivers tonight leaving at least 10 persons dead and property damage estimated unofficially at $5,000,000.

Meantime, cloudbursts in southwestern Arkansas brought more than six inches of rain in 12 hours causing flash floods that disrupted traffic and forced 200 residents of West Texarkana to evacuate their homes in boats.

Mayor J. B. Traxler, of Hallettsville, estimated damage here alone totaled $1,000,000. Lowlands were flooded through south-central Texas and crops washed out by deluges that totaled upwards to 20 inches over the week-end.

Germans Protest Chile Editorials

Santiago, Chile, July 1 (AP).—The German Embassy protested in a note to the Chilean Foreign Ministry today against newspaper editorials it termed "offensive." The note said the criticism by the Communist paper Frente Popular was particularly objectionable.

Few Protest Higher Taxes For Defense

Only 'Chronic Kickers' Object, Capital Area Business Places Report

Mr. and Mrs. Washington consumer got their first taste of the new national defense taxes yesterday and took them in their stride, with hardly a murmur of protest.

They felt the taxes in the price of movies, liquor, cigarettes and gasoline but, untrue to tradition, expressed willingness to pay. For it was all for the country's protection against any possible aggressor.

"It was the most remarkable and gratifying experience I've had in all my life," said one liquor store proprietor. "We had expected all kinds of squawks, as past experience had taught us to prepare for kicks against the Government and everything in general when there was a raise in taxes.

"But my customers, from the highest to the lowest, paid the extra prices willingly. Some even said they would be glad to pay more."

Liquor prices in some Washington stores rose an estimated average of 25 cents a quart, the increases ranging from 20 cents to about 40 cents. In other stores, a flat increase of 20 cents a quart, 10 cents a pint and 5 cents a half pint was adopted.

Beer generally sold for 10 cents a can or bottle straight, instead of three for a quarter, and 15-cent beer in many instances was boosted to 20 cents. The size of glasses for draught beer was cut in some bars. Other bars contemplated adding 5 cents to the price of "hard" drinks or cutting down on their size.

These new prices resulted from the national defense tax of 75 cents per 100-proof gallon on liquor and $1 per barrel on beer. Increases in wholesale prices of some whiskies took effect at the same time, raising the retail cost even higher.

Higher prices were reflected in the system employed by distillers and wholesalers to compute the profits due from their investments. Some distillers, for instance, charged a 20 per cent mark-up on their usual prices plus the tax, instead of merely adding the taxes to the already marked-up prices.

The half-cent per package defense tax on cigarettes was absorbed by most of the chain stores, but individual retailers generally boosted the standard brand prices from 13 cents a pack and two for 25 cents to 14 cents a pack and two for 27 cents.

Standard brand cigarettes by the carton rose variously from $1.20 to $1.21, $1.22, $1.23 and $1.24. Cigarettes ordinarily selling for 15 cents a pack and two packs for 29 cents generally remained the same.

With the 10 per cent amusement tax base lowered from 41 cents to 21 cents, theaters listed a "defense tax" item on their price signs, and moviegoers received pennies in change.

They paid 28 cents instead of 25; 39 cents instead of 35, and 44 cents instead of 40.

A few customers complained of the odd-penny problem, box offices reported, but the overwhelming majority paid the new admissions without objection.

Filling station operators reported the gasoline-consuming public apparently did not notice the ½-cent increase in the price of gas. Most of the operators absorbed the ½-cent per gallon increase in the tax on oil.

In all lines, businessmen said only the "chronic complainers" objected to the new taxes, while the rest of the consuming public took them with the best of grace.

Manufacturers of a number of other products also are being taxed for defense, but the public is not expected to feel any difference in prices for some time, if ever.

Here Are Up-to-Minute Figures On Rapidly Expanding American Fleet to insure and reinsure vessels of the merchant marine against war risks, setting up a $50,000,000 revolving fund for this purpose. He also approved legislation to permit the commission to maintain in good condition all "essential" merchant ships which otherwise might deteriorate through being taken off their regular runs by operation of the neutrality act.

The War Department cut short the vacations of 444 recent West Point graduates because of the need of the expanding Army for officers to train troops. Their leaves will be terminated on July 31 instead of September 11, as originally scheduled.

Approves Construction

President Roosevelt signed bills authorizing appropriations of $18,500,000 for construction work at 25 military posts, including Fort Belvoir, Fort Myer, Edgewood Arsenal and Aberdeen Proving Ground.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, in a resolution called on the War and Navy departments to insist that contractors in the defense program use "as many shifts as possible" of workers since "time is of the essense, and plenty of labor is available.

Phillip Young, 31-year-old son of retired industrialist Owen D. Young, was appointed to President Roosevelt's committee to co-ordinate foreign and domestic war material purchases.

Young, who has been on the Treasury's legal staff and formerly was similarly employed by the Securities Commission, succeeded Donald M. Nelson, former Sears, Roebuck & Co. executive, as the Treasury's member of the three-man group. The others are Col. James H. Burns, of the Army, and Admiral Ray Speer, of the Navy.

Nelson resigned from the committee and also from the directorship of the Treasury's procurement division to accept a new appointment from the President to co-ordinate all buying of the Army, Navy and Treasury.

Procurement Director

Secretary Morgenthau announced that the new procurement director would be Clifton Mack, of Boston, a long-time civil service employe of the agency.

Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, announcing creation of the rubber and tin reserve companies, said the rubber would cost between 18 and 20 cents a pound and tin 50 cents a pound. The Metals Reserve Co. also will buy and carry reserve supplies of other critical and strategic materials, including manganese. The RFC authorized loans of $100,000,000 to the latter and $65,000,000 to the rubber-buying concern.

The Army expansion program soon to be announced is designed to match the Navy's supplemental $4,000,000,000 program already passed by the House. It contemplates special emphasis on tanks, combat cars, planes, antiaircraft and antitank guns.

Ship contracts let yesterday by Acting Secretary of the Navy Compton involve 193,000 tons of combat craft.

The "speed-up" bill, the signing of which makes possible awards without bidding, permits advancement of 30 per cent of contract prices to finance plant expansion. It also prohibits sale or transfer of Government-owned defense supplies to a foreign government unless the Army chief of staff or the chief of naval operations certifies that they are surplus and "not essential to the national defense."

The act also limits profits on negotiated contracts for ships and planes to 7 per cent, and to 8 per cent on contracts granted after bidding.

Compton said elimination of bidding on the contracts let yesterday would save the Government between $16,000,000 and $17,000,000 in addition to the saving in time.

Announcement of the industries-training program, which would be under direction of Sidney Hillman, defense commission member, was followed last night by notice from Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, that he will offer today a resilution to create the office of NNational Defense Personnel Administrator to have charge of the training undertaking.

Envoys' Ouster Heralds Nazis' 'New Order'

U. S., Other Legations Told to Quit Occupied Countries by July 15

By the Associated Press

A German order for American and other diplomatic missions to get out of four occupied countries by July 15 was interpreted in informed quarters last night as a further step in the creation of a broader Nazi economic system in Europe.

The official attitude of this Government toward the new order applying to Belgium, the Netherlands, Norway and Luxembourg was not disclosed. In the case of Poland, a more sweeping order applying to consular as well as diplomatic missions was complied with under protest.

Embassy and legation staffs, with the exception of Ambassador John Cudahy at Brussels and Minister George A. Gordon at The Hague, apparently could remain in their status as consular officials. The Oslo legation is under a charge d'affaires, Raymond E. Cox. Ambassador Cudahy has charge of Luxembourg.

Meanwhile, the State Department announced that William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, had left German-occupied Paris for the new temporary capital, Clermont-Ferrand, to resume relations with the French government which were broken when the former Reynaud ministry fled Paris for Bordeaux.

It was understood that Bullitt himself decided upon the move and that it did not represent any new Government decision on future relations with the French government. Behind the German plan to clear occupied territories of foreign diplomatic missions, it was said in well informed quarters, was probably a desire to push economic reorganization and control without close foreign scrutiny.

Germany now, however, was believed anxious to eliminate foreign, and especially American influences as it set about establishing a new continental order. The Nazis also were believed irked at the presence of diplomatic representatives still accredited to governments now in exile.

"There's a Difference WORTH KNOWING!"

The Famous Recipe in Rhyme:

A LITTLE SOUR, (Juice of half a lime)

A LITTLE SWEET, (½ teaspoonful of sugar)

THE TROPIC SUN; (A jigger of BACARDI RUM) (White or Silver)

WITHOUT THE HEAT! (Ice and shake well)

(When grenadine is used instead of sugar, it's a BACARDI Grenadine Cocktail and it comes out pink!)

Odd Jobs:

Transit Company Pitman Wouldn't Trade His Hard Job Under Tracks for the World

This is the first of a series of stories on Washingtonians with unusual jobs. If you know of someone whose job is "different," send the person's name, type of work, and address to The Post's City Editor.

RUBLE AT WORK IN HIS "CAVE"

By George Thorpe.

You've probably never seen him. Perhaps you didn't know he existed—that genial, 57-year-old man who spends his days in a cave under Wisconsin avenue, taking Washingtonians to work in the morning and bringing them home at night.

Louis W. Ruble, of 1428 Wisconsin avenue northwest, is pitman at the junction of the Capital Transit Co.'s overhead and underground system between P and Q streets, and he knows his business.

Eight hours a day, six days a week, through 34 years, life for Ruble has meant confinement in the gadget-strewn walls of an underground cubbyhole, roughly 8 feet by 15—and overhead always the rumble of street cars, approaching and fading away.

At intervals ranging from 4½ minutes at midday to 1½ at rush hours, he wrestles with 47-pound steel "plows," completes high-voltage circuits, signals mutely to an invisible motorman to haul his human cargo on its way.

There are times in winter when the snow avalanches down from trolleys hovering over the sliding steel roof of his pit, and in summer when the best efforts of his electric fan fail to dent the pea soup humidity.

But anyone who has seen the veteran at work can tell you he wouldn't trade his job for all the trolleys in the M street car barn.

As clean as your office, with its fan and heater, its hot and cold running water, it is solid job comfort to the man who started his bread-winning in a coal mine.

Right now the pitman is on the early shift. At 4:25 a. m. he lifts a sidewalk grating, climbs down a steel ladder, and says good-by to the light of day until 3:35 p. m.

He receives 57 cents per hour and this is what he does to earn it:

Wearing overalls, his hands encased in heavy gauntlets, Ruble hears the hum of a trolley coming north. As the car reaches a point just below the junction and stops, he presses a switch which flashes a signal light on the avenue, indicating to the trolley motorman he is ready for the car to move over the hole. This switch also "energizes," or supplies with current, the motors whose electric circuit has been broken.

The compressed air-driven doors then slide back, and the street car moves over the pit, automatically dropping its "plow," complicated steel and wire connection with the underground rail. Ruble cranes upward and connects two terminals to complete a circuit. He then flashes the signal light again to tell the motorman he has completed his part of the job.

RUBLE GIVES "GO" SIGNAL

Meanwhile, Raymond Burton, of 1517 Wisconsin avenue northwest, the above ground "trollyman," has raised the trolley to the overhead wire. The street car moves off. The entire process has taken five seconds.

Harder is Ruble's job with the southbound cars. Here when the trolleys move over the pit, he must heave up into place the heavy plow, performing the same ritual with the light signals. This takes 15 seconds.

When Ruble finishes work for the day, it is not to mingle with the crowds and traffic from which 9-inch walls have separated him during the day.

Usually he goes home and tunes in on the day's international news. His pit is not a "world-proof shelter" Ruble says. He likes to recall his days in the National Guard, his place in his country of yesterday—and of today, and tomorrow.

British Fear Seizure of Eire Will Preface Nazi Invasion

Col. Saint-Gaudens Praises Britain's Camouflage Defense

By Scott Hart

Post Staff Writer

When the Nazis commence their long advertised attack on the British Isles they probably will find the defenders considerably fortified behind optical illusions, among other things.

British camouflage developments are rated highly by Lieut. Col. Homer Schiff Saint-Gaudens, World War camouflage expert, more recently director of Fine Arts, Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, who arrived here yesterday on active duty for a month in the Army Chief of Engineers office.

Saint-Gaudens doesn't try to palm camouflage off as the chief device whereby wars are won.

Has Limitations

He doesn't think cities can be painted out or large bodies of moving infantry made invisible "or that men can climb standing ropes."

He doesn't think there is any concealment color much better than the doughboys' khaki. He doesn't think that any sort of concealment is much good unless it is practical. That's why he believes it will be difficult to conceal completely moving bodies that would have to be encumbered with extra paraphernalia.

Field artillery and other mobile weapons are most advantageously camouflaged, he said. Except to throw off balance the eye of dive-bombing airmen, camouflage isn't so effective against long-standing objects. "The fifth columns have fixed these on the maps," he explained.

English Master Art

His visits to Europe to select and bring home paintings for the Carnegie Institution's international exhibitions, enabled him to watch camouflage developments in this war. Then, a year ago, Germans predicted to him that the war would be one "of intense movement." They have ably concealed their barracks and aviation concentration points, he learned there. Also "the English army has mastered the art of practical concealment and has used that art to great advantage."

Son of the sculptor, Augustus Saint Gaudens, he was a captain in the World War, commanding Company A, Fortieth Engineers (First Camouflage Unit) in charge of camouflage work on the front of the Second Division.

He says he can't draw, or paint; then infers it doesn't matter because a good stage director makes the best camouflage workman. This would let him in: he was once stage director for Maude Adams.

Graziani Takes Balbo Post In North Africa

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 1.—Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, tough veteran of Italy's colonial wars, returned tonight to Libya, scene of his earlier triumphs, to succeed the late Marshal Italo Balbo as commander of north African forces.

His mission was to save from British invasion the territory which, between 1921 and 1929, he reclaimed from native rebels.

Capture of several British positions along the Libyan-Egyptian border was claimed by the high command, which also said that an Italian torpedo boat had sunk a British submarine. It reported at least eight British planes were shot down.

It acknowledged the loss of the destroyer Espero, a 1,073-ton warship with a normal complement of 143. The Espero, it said, failed to return to its base after "heroically" battling three British cruisers and several destroyers.

In sharp fighting on the Egyptian frontier, the high command said, Fascist forces put "various" tanks and armored cars out of action.

[British Moyale, on the Ethiopian border, was twice attacked yesterday by Italian forces, but both attacks were checked, according to a British communique issued at Nairobi, Kenya Colony.]

[British headquarters in Cairo reported only that operations in the Western desert are "continuing" while the Royal Air Force and the South African Air Force carried out minor raids in Italian East Africa. Seven Italian planes have been shot down since Saturday morning, the British said.]

While Balbo's body began its long journey back to Italy, the circumstances of his death remained obscure. Italian correspondents reported that he rushed into an air battle which he found raging over Tobruk and British machine-gun fire shot down his plane, killing him and eight others.

(In London, however, the British Foreign Office recalled coolness of Premier Mussolini toward the marshal; declared "no British aircraft" was involved in the fatal crash.)

Graziani is chief of staff of the Italian army and commander of the army of the Po. He is expected to retain the staff assignment, but drop the army command. With the capitulation of France, the importance of the army of the Po as defender of northern Italy became secondary to that of the forces fighting the British in north Africa.

No Italian officer has wider experience in desert warfare than Graziani. His early career was in Eritrea and Libya. After the World War, in which he served on the Austrian front and was twice wounded, he was sent to Libya to reassert Italian sovereignty over territory which native forces occupied while the Italians were busy elsewhere. At the start of the Ethiopian war he was placed in command of Italian armies in Somaliland.

Polish, French, Czech Divisions May Be Sent to Guard Isle

Copyright by New York Times

London, July 1.—Neutral Eire, unprepared for war, wracked by factionalism, and suspicious of Britain, is causing increasing concern to those charged with the duty of defending this country. Many military experts here believe that before Hitler undertakes a decisive stroke against this island, he will try to capture Eire as he took Norway.

There have been many conversations recently in London, Dublin and Belfast in an effort to find a formula whereby British or Allied troops can garrison the threatened country without offending Free State sensibilities. One suggestion is that the Polish and Czech divisions, together with the French Legion being formed by Gen. Charles de Gaulle, be sent to northern Ireland to await a call for help from President de Valera.

By this means, it is suggested, the Allies would have a strong force ready on Irish soil if Hitler should attempt a blitzkrieg against the only neutral member of the British commonwealth of nations. It is argued that Polish, French and Czech troops, mostly Catholic, would be more acceptable to the people of the Free State than British troops who only recently were regarded as soldiers of an enemy.

The recent speech of Lord Craigavon, premier of Ulster, gave a broad hint of the direction of the reported talks. He said that Sean O'Kelley, vice premier of Eire, "referred to partition in a way which clearly indicates that President de Valera is again blackmailing the British government to end the partition."

However, Lord Craigavon said, he was prepared to "enter closest cooperation with De Valera in matters of defense, provided that he takes a stand . . . at the side of Britain and the empire . . .

There is the stumbling block. The British government is seeking to minimize the vulnerability of Ireland by establishing harmony between Ulster and Eire. Ulster, meanwhile, is demanding that Eire terminate her neutral policy and enter the war at Britain's side, while it appears Premier de Valera's price is a postwar union.

The people of Eire are skeptical of the danger of invasion and somewhat suspicious of the motives of those who warned of the necessity to prepare for defense. These people appeared to be determined to resist alone, rather than invite British forces to return. De Valera's appeal for volunteers for his expanding army met slight response and in many quarters it was suspected that he was using the fear of invasion as an excuse for building up an army to fight on Britain's side on foreign soil.

The danger confronting Eire is a real one, however, and it has been increased by Nazi occupation of ports in Western France. To complete the encirclement of Britain, Hitler now has only to capture Iceland, now occupied by British troops, and to move into Ireland.

Strategists are agreed that of all these, Eire is the most vulnerable because of the abundance of local intrigues, party squabbles of the same nature as those the Nazis exploited successfully in Norway, Holland, Belgium and France, and because of the existence in Eire of a potential fifth column.

"Box Office Champions" For May Only Half Right!

Cash Customers Seem to Have Stubbed Toes; 'Ramparts We Watch' Will Premiere Here; This, That and the Other About the Theater

NOT FOR MANY WEEKS have the "Box-Office Champions" of any month been cited in this space, but the June 29 issue of Martin Quigley's Motion Picture Herald comes to bat with a list of six for May, which might as well be passed along for what the information may be worth.

BELL

The "Box-Office Champions," it will be recalled, are the first-run releases in key cities throughout the country which bona fide audits have proved to have attracted the greatest patronage. There were six of them in May and, in the estimation of this department, three of them deserved to be up there in the top brackets. The other three could have been anywhere else, so far as we are concerned.

Here they are: "Buck Benny Rides Again," "If I Had My Way," "Lillian Russell," "My Favorite Wife," "My Son, My Son" and "Rebecca." For the first time we can remember since we began paying attention to such things, neither Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer nor the Warner Brothers had a winner at the ticket wickets in the fifth month. The score was one each for Paramount, Universal, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO-Radio and two for United Artists.

All of these productions have been seen in Washington and I leave it up to you to decide which would have been omitted from top honors in a Washington vote.

Having been finally completed after more than a year and a half spent in production, "The Ramparts We Watch," the first feature-length film ever made by the editors of Time and Life —makers of "The March of Time"—will have its world premiere a week from tonight at RKO-Keith's Theater. In the words of its makers, "The Ramparts We Watch," not quite like any other picture that has gone before it, "reveals how irrevocably the present crisis is linked with the war of a generation ago, shows how and why America fought the First World War and reviews the folly and miscalculations of the post-war generation which, through lack of courage and foresight, failed to keep the peace."

That isn't exactly "escapist," but is something everybody ought to learn about. Furthermore, we are assured that this is not a "documentary" film, in the usual sense. It is, on the contrary, an exact and dramatic portrayal of its period, employing every art of the motion picture and every technique of journalism to picture the spirit of the people and the crisis they faced in 1914-18—usually described as a Sunday School picnic compared with what grips the world today.

⟿

And that reminds me. Conditions in England, where there really is a crisis, place no damper upon the activities of the indefatigable D'Oyly Carte Opera Company. These hardy perennial Savoyards presented their familiar repertoire of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas in the Wimbledon Theater, London, for two weeks, beginning June 10, and went on to the King's Theater, Hammersmith, for three weeks, starting June 24. If that isn't flouting the air-raiders, I don't know what is.

⟿

The complaint is pretty well refuted by now that the Capital sees only a portion of the cream of the motion picture crop and loses out on many other fine pictures presented in other cities. A survey of the current Broadway bills will demonstrate that they are almost identically matched by our own. Remarkable as it may seem, the number of representative first-run houses in what is elastically termed New York's Times Square area is not much greater than we can boast in our own midcity zone, although Gotham's aggregate seating capacity is much larger. Among the current Manhattan exhibits unfamiliar to Washington are such items as "Sailor's Lady," "Queen of the Mob," "Hell in the West" and one or two other flamboyant flickers. Week for week this city leads the country in the uniform merit of its movie fare. So let's hear no more about it.

⟿

Their many friends in and out of "show business" will be glad to learn that John J. Payette, jr., son of Zone Manager Payette, of Warner Brothers, and his charming wife, "Dixie," is reported as resting comfortably at Garfield Hospital, following an appendix operation.

⟿

That antiquated gadget being exhibited in the lobby of the Columbia Theater, in conjunction with the repeat showing of "Edison, the Man," is a projection machine invented by the "Wizard of Menlo Park" back in the cradle days of the motion picture industry. There wasn't much back there, pertaining to the movies," that Edison didn't invent.

And-the-Back-of-My-Hand-to-You-Sir Note

I forget who invented the double-feature bill!

Ben Hecht is having a swell time directing his story, "Before I Die." He's shooting John Qualen at more cock-eyed angles than John knew he had . . . Doug Fairbanks and Tommy Mitchell say Ben is a great guy to work with. He learned how to handle people through his news reporting years ago in Chicago. I loved listening to Ben's philosophy of directing in very few words. "Never heckle actors," says Ben. "When you nag them, you're asking for trouble—and then they begin getting flammy after the second take. So leave your actors alone and they'll come home, wagging the scene behind them."

Too bad 20th Century Fox wouldn't give Alice Faye a two weeks' vacation after she'd finished "Lillian Russell" and doing personal appearances with that film. Of course, she was tired. HARRY HOPKINS was the first member of the White House family to make any comment about the nominations of Wendell Willkie and Senator McNary. Although Willkie is the man of the hour and already has become a phenomenon in American politics, Hopkins is confident that he will be defeated in November . . . "Wilkie's nomination," said the Secretary of Commerce yesterday, "means that the President will have to make only two campaign speeches—one in Maine, the other in Vermont."

SID GARY is telling of the day when Joe Frisco, the stuttering comic, lunched in a restaurant near the Palace, where all the vaudevillians foregathered. While Frisco was distracted by a conversation with another actor to his left, a midget vaudevillian approached the table. He was so short that, even while standing, his chin rested on the large empty plate set beside the comic . . . Frisco finished his conversation, turned to begin his meal and noticed the midget's chin resting on that large plate . . . "S-s-say," Frisco gasped, "who-the-hell ordered J-J-John the Baptist."

Izetta Jewel Returns to Cross Roads

Last Summer's Popular Star Appears in 'A Woman's a Fool'

By Richard L. Coe

Trailing clouds of glory, a Russian accent with a smidget of Siberian and some mighty snappy outfits, Izetta Jewel, jr., returned last night to the stage of Virginia's Cross Roads Theater. This was decidedly a good thing. Miss Jewell's vehicle was a comedy titled "A Woman's a Fool"—which was not such a very good thing.

Nor was Miss Jewel the only attractive person on the stage of the natty red barn last evening. A shapely creature yclept Elizabeth Winburn, as the right angle of a triangle, gave an excellent account of herself and provoked justified comparisons to Helen Vinson. A young fellow named Allen Andrews looked and acted the part in a Tyrone Power role. The setting was most attactive and Josephine Orendorff's costumes make her the Valentina of the corn country.

Now, in the summertime and in such pleasant surroundings, with everything in evidence to rejoice the eye, an indulgent reviewer is happy to look with favor on the corniest script. But one Dorothy Bennett and Link Hannah have taken advantage of their surroundings. Their play is of the triangle genre, that one about the playwright writing a play which parallels the situation in his private life in which he is being wooed from his charming wife by a glittering blitzkrieg.

Miss Jewel Surpasses Role

This particular b—k—g is a nasty little wench with a tiresome Russian accent and, try as she does, Izetta Jewel is never for a moment convincing in this unsympathetic part. She is beautiful, adorable to watch and one rejoices that she is back at Bailey's Cross Roads, but she is no vixen. Even as a well-written menace, you couldn't dislike Miss Jewel. During her season with Maurice Evans she has lost one or two little mannerisms of last summer and has further bettered her stage presence.

Miss Winburn was so charming, as the wife, that one questioned Reginald Allen's sanity for dashing off to the bench with his wordy flirt. Otherwise, Mr. Allen is having a happy fortnight from his announcing chores with the Columbia Broadcasting System, as the fuddled husband.

Young Mr. Andrews was facile and natural as the unawed onlooker. Miss Orendorff, our Valentina of the Cornfields, also played an onlooker, the acidulous wife of a dyspeptic producer. Sidney Bassler, since we are going in for cinematic comparisons, was the spit image of Frank Morgan as said producer. One of the more remarkable things about the casting was Gray Alvord's tennis-playing butler, a colored chap whose accent varied from the long "a" of Oxford to the mournful tones of the deep South. Phyllis Warner and Myrtle Oliver completed the cast, directed by Howard Wentworth.

"A Woman's a Fool——," with the redeeming presence of Miss Jewel and her attractive associates, will continue at the Cross Roads through Saturday, July 13.

Metropolitan

For him—or her—who would have a laugh this July morning, "The Ghost Breakers' returns to the downtown sector as manna from heaven. The Bob Hope comedy comes into the Metropolitan today four days after completing a happy week at the Earle.

"The Ghost Breakers" is a wind-blown adventure of spooks and zombies in a Cuban castle, the thought of which is enough to send a winter sports enthusiast down to Morro Castle. To be sure, the castle is as fictitious as the gossipy radiocaster through which Hope wisecracks. When he has himself locked in a trunk to avoid being clapped into jail for murder and is finally unpacked from it, a bent and hobbling figure, you'll realize that here is a gag that hasn't been so funny since Shakespeare put Fallstaff in a laundry hamper. And with Hope to utter irrelevancies out of the corner of his mouth the while in good American slang, it's vastly effective comedy.

Paulette Goddard plays a young girl who inherits the Cuban castle, center of the ruckus. The old spot literally crawls with ghosts and peculiar beings. With Hope as his valet is one Willie Best, a slender "Rochester" whose terror is understandable. There is a neat crack about zombies and Democrats. Like the other Hope-Goddard mystery-comedy, "The Cat and the Canary," the only fault with "The Ghost Breakers" is that the Hope laugh lines crowd so closely upon each other that a few juicy ones get lost in the shuffle.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, July 1 (INS).—Good morning to you!

I am happy to be seated at the old typewriter again, even though I did have the best holiday of my life. Try it sometime—the Lurline or Monterey, Royal Hawaiian and Waikiki Beach. It's great to make you forget all your troubles, both fancied and real.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Chatted with David Selznick to check the report that he was asking $150,000 for Vivien Leigh to star in "The Constant Nymph" for Warners—and thereby hangs a story:

It was Alex Korda, it appears, who mentioned that modest sum. Alex owns part of Scarlett's contract. Getting that kind of money in these war times is out of the question, so Alex will co-star Vivien and Laurence Olivier in "Cyrano de Bergerac." Even though their show, "Romeo and Juliet," cannot be called a world beater, and the critics were a little harsh, Vivien and Laurence are still the screen's No. 1 lovers and one good picture will make their Shakespearean interlude a forgotten passage. Besides, they both can really act.

⟿

Sounds almost like lese majeste to change the character of Alexander Woolcott in "The Man Who Came to Dinner" to a younger, more romantic hero. Yet that is what is in the minds of co-authors George S. Kaufman and Moss Hart, so I suppose I better mind my own business. George and Moss are trying to borrow Fredric March or Cary Grant, if the invalid becomes more lively and younger. But, if the story remains the same, John Barrymore will get the Woolcott plum. I would like to see Jawn play it. He would be swell, wouldn't he?

The Bernie Williams (she was Kay Mulvey and is a successful magazine writer) have dated the stork in November. Bernie is with Bob Taplinger in Warner's praise department: Mickey Rooney gave way to song at the Cocoanut Grove and favored with one of his original compositions, "I'm Not Afraid of the Moon"; Brenda Marshall has had sketches made of every one of the characters William Holden has played in the movies; Perc Westmore has been made chairman of all the beauty shops in the Red Cross drive; Lloyd Bacon and Beatrice Fairchild, Seattle socialite, at Blanche Goldie's Torch Club. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

My living depends on the MILEAGE PROVED TO YOUR OWN EYES BY YOUR CONOCO MILE-DIAL..FREE

BESIDES LIKING THIS TOWN as if it was part of me, I'm in business here, and I want to keep going. I'm out to make progress, so I've got plenty at stake in asking you to come here for one of the Conoco Mile-Dials I'll give you absolutely free.

YOU'LL SEE right away why your Mile-Dial can't lie about the real mileage you get from my Conoco Bronz-z-z gasoline. I bank on the straight true mileage figures you'll register for yourself on this Mile-Dial I've got here for you free as air.

IT'S ANOTHER KNOCKOUT of an invention by Conoco. Looks keen and up-to-date. I'll put it on the dash in half a second, or wherever you want it—never making a mark, either. Instead of being any work it's quite a sport, as my customers say, to let the Mile-Dial keep close tabs on their Conoco Bronz-z-z mileage. They say they like to do it, even when they've always been so satisfied they never bothered before.

YOU OUGHT TO HEAR them tell how they can now compare their city and country mileage on Conoco Bronz-z-z and how they can keep checking Bronz-z-z under all other different conditions, to get their honest average, and no mistakes.

YOU CAN KEEP RIGHT ON CHECKING Bronz-z-z on your free Conoco Mile-Dial, till you've got the plainest answer anybody could get about gasoline mileage. Not just a lot of words I might say, because with your Mile-Dial you get actual mileage figures to see.

YOU'D SAY GASOLINE IS TOO CHEMICAL for the average consumer to take apart, but you've got to admit that the Conoco Mile-Dial comes out with the answer that really counts, which is mileage. And what's going to be more fun than dialing your Conoco Bronz-z-z mileage on any Fourth of July trip you're taking? So drive in to my station today, before I might run short, and let me put on your Conoco Mile-Dial—ALL FREE.

NOT SO NERVY I don't ask you to hang my ad out on your car. Your Conoco Mile-Dial is private. Goes on the dash. Reports your Bronz-z-z mileage strictly to you.

TRUCK OWNERS are going big for the Mile-Dial, because thev've got to have economy proof.

Legacy Of Peter

Since the days of Peter the Great Russia has been stretching restless fingers in the direction of the Dardanelles and the Mediterranean. But always her reach has exceeded her grasp.

Turkey has always stood in the way and behind Turkey, in the days of the decline of the Ottoman empire, stood the Western powers, notably Great Britain. Now a unique opportunity beckons to the Bolshevik successors of the Czars to fulfill the ambitions of Peter and Catherine. France is in a state of complete collapse; Great Britain, Germany and Italy are engaged in a war to the death. Only Turkey remains and Turkey may be no match for the mechanized legions of the Kremlin.

The danger of a Russian thrust toward the Bosphorus is, at the moment, more potential than actual. Thus it is reported from Sofia that the Turks have been assured by Moscow that Stalin has no intention of moving further southward. Yet the fact remains that Russia has taken Bessarabia and part of Bukovina. She may not stop there. And no other great power or even small power is in a position to help Turkey should that country choose to resist a Russian thrust at the vital artery she controls.

The only real deterrent to such action is that it would sooner or later make inevitable a conflict between Russia and whatever power or powers emerge victorious from the present European war. It is most unlikely that Great Britain, should she manage to survive her present ordeal, would accept Russia as a neighbor in the eastern Mediterranean. And the same would hold true for Italy and Germany should they win the war. The makings of another conflict are thus to be found in Russia's recent moves and what may be their ambitious sequel.

Asia For The Japanese

Foreign Minister Arita's statement of Japanese policy regarding Eastern Asia and the South Seas is vague in detail, no doubt deliberately so, for the island empire is not yet ready to put all its cards on the table. But it does not conceal Japan's apparent preparations to stake out new and far-reaching claims to territory in the Far East.

Hitherto Mr. Arita has emphasized Japan's interest in maintenance of the status quo for Eastern Asiatic colonies. He has now changed his tune. He speaks of "the uniting of all these regions (East Asia and the South Seas) in a single sphere" and declares that such a development would be "a natural conclusion."

As long as victory for Great Britain and France appeared to be on the cards Japan avoided excessive provocation of those powers. But her statesmen see no point in exercising such restraint any longer. Recent events have increased the likelihood of a Nazi triumph. Japan must now reckon with the possibility that the British, French and Dutch colonies in the Far East may be taken over by Germany or by Germany and Italy. Such a development the Japanese understandably wish to avoid, just as the United States refuses to permit the British, French and Dutch West Indies to fall into the hands of the Axis powers.

But this tells only part of the story. The motives behind Japan's new-found ambitions are only partly defensive; they are also expansionist. With France prostrate and Great Britain fighting for her life, Japan sees a unique opportunity to take over the colonial holdings of those nations in the Far East. That is, no doubt, why Japanese troops have been rushed to the borders of Indo-China and why a Japanese squadron is at Haiphong. It is for the same reason that the preliminary steps have been taken by Japan to impose a rigorous blockade of Hongkong.

Mr. Arita's latest statement indicates also that Japan's present ambitions go even beyond Hongkong and Indo-China. It suggests the desire on Tokyo's part to establish Japan's hegemony over the entire region from Siberia to Australia. And while he asserts the wisdom of "peoples who are related geographically, racially, culturally and economically to form spheres of their own" Tokyo's policy in recent years justifies an assumption that Japan will be satisfied with nothing less than overlordship over these related peoples of the Far East.

Thus Stalin's sudden assault on Rumania may find a counterpart in the Far East, with the Japanese militarists in the role of the Red dictator.

The Burke Bill

Impressive arguments both for and against compulsory military training are heard as that subject comes nearer to discussion in the halls of Congress. The American people have a strong dislike for compulsion in any sphere. Yet an increasing number recognize that some form of selective draft may be essential to defense.

The case for compulsory training and service was ably presented by Senator Burke Sunday night in his radio debate with Senator Capper. To double the strength of the Navy, to build and man 50,000 airplanes or assemble a large standing army, he pointed out, would require enormous sums of money. Moreover, any one of these proposed defense efforts would doubtless require some kind of selective service to obtain the essential man power.

Like many other Americans, Senator Capper finds universal conscription in peacetime to be repugnant. In case of war, however, he would favor the selective military draft. The only weakness in this position is that modern war usually moves too swiftly to permit the training of a large army after it has begun.

Certainly the United States would be in a much stronger position today if, during the last decade, it had systematically trained its young men in the technique of defense. This lack of preparation in the past cannot now be changed. But Congress should realistically consider our possible need for men with military training a few months and a few years hence.

It does not follow that Congress should enact Senator Burke's compulsory training bill as it now stands. That measure has many constructive features such as the proposed registration of all male citizens between 18 and 65. But it would also give the President far-reaching powers to mobilize the man power of the Nation, in times of peace or war, for military, vocational or educational training and service.

The bill directs the President "as soon as possible, to select for training and service . . . such number of men as in his judgment, whether a state of war exists or not, are required in the national interest." Most of these men would be drawn by lot from the age group from 21 to 31 years. Training could be deferred for men in strategic industries and professions, for men with families and for the "physically, mentally or morally deficient." In peacetime training would be limited to eight months.

This immense power over the men of America would accrue to the President only after the appropriation of funds by Congress to carry out the purposes of the act. Even so, the proposal involves drastic innovations for a democracy in peacetime. The bill does not call merely for the routine training of young men between the completion of their schooling and the beginning of their business, professional or occupational work. It would authorize complete mobilization of the Nation's man power.

That is a proposal which demands the most critical examination.

The Balbo Mystery

According to the official Italian version, Italo Balbo "died at his post in combat" when the plane he was piloting over Tobruk, Cyrenaica, was shot down in a fight with British aircraft.

But, the question immediately began to be asked, why was Italy's air marshal risking—and losing—his life on a venture normally entrusted to an inferior? It is the same question in different form, but with the same overtones of doubt and suspicion, which was asked when early in Germany's Polish campaign Gen. Werner von Fritsch was reported killed while engaged in outpost duty, a function seldom performed by general officers.

Rumor had it that Gen. von Fritsch had been put out of the way because he had been an outspoken opponent of Hitler in the Reichswehr. And similar suspicions regarding the death of Marshal Balbo now find circulation. For Balbo was one of the few men whose popularity rivaled that of the Duce, a circumstance which may explain why, at the very peak of his career as head of the Italian air force, he had been sent to Libya as governor. Was Balbo then a victim of his popularity with the Italian people?

The suspicion may be wholly unfounded. It is difficult to see what good Mussolini or the Fascist regime could derive from the elimination of an individual whose organizing ability is particularly needed at the present time.

But the British, for obvious reasons, are missing no tricks in attempting to embarrass Mussolini by keeping alive the suspicion of foul play. They have announced that there were no British planes anywhere in the vicinity of Tobruk at the time Balbo's plane crashed in flames, and they are coupling the mystery of Balbo's death with that of Von Fritsch.

The full details of what actually happened in both instances may never be known. Meanwhile a new legend may be in the making. Gen. Kitchener went down on the Hampshire in 1916. But it was many years before people gave up the belief that he was still alive. T. E. Lawrence was reported as showing up in widely different places even though his death in a motorcycle accident in England had been authenticated.

So the glamorous Italo Balbo may become the center of a new myth. The time will soon be ripe for someone to come forth with a claim that Balbo is not dead at all but only engaged on a secret mission somewhere in the wide world.

No Economy Here

Although the mid-June index of farm prices is the lowest recorded by the Department of Agriculture since the outbreak of the war, it is well above the level of a year ago. Cash income of farmers during the first six months of this year was above that of the corresponding period in 1939, and the department concludes that it may remain higher during the second half year.

While the European export outlook has grown increasingly gloomy, as the result of Nazi victories, it is expected that the stimulative effects of the defense program will be reflected in a better domestic demand for farm products.

Despite these improvements in the farmer's financial position, agricultural appropriations for the fiscal year just beginning are almost equal to the record-breaking $1,500,000,000 total appropriated last year. An apparent decrease of $304,000,000 in farm appropriations is whittled down to only $29,000,000, if account is taken of $275,000,000 in RFC loans made available to the department. Funds for similar loans were included in the appropriation figures for last year.

Actual payments to farmers under the soil-conservation program will not be materially less than under the 1940 program. The smaller appropriation this year will be supplemented by $60,000,000 of unexpended funds. Furthermore, Secretary Wallace has $235,000,000 to spend for removal of surplus commodities—an increase of $30,000,000. A large part of this money will doubtless be used to extend the stamp plan. Only a negligible reduction has been made in the much-fought-over parity payments which are placed at $212,000,000.

Now there are indications that the Department of Agriculture is planning to dispose of farm surpluses at a cost of many more millions of public money. The director of marketing recently outlined a program for subsidizing domestic consumption of cotton that would, he estimated, cost close to $650,000,000 yearly. While this plan is still in the discussion stage, the mere fact that it was presented to a farm audience for consideration is disturbing.

With another huge deficit chalked up by the Treasury, and billions needed for defense purposes, it is urgent that every unnecessary expense be eliminated. Yet the heaviest spender of them all—the Department of Agriculture—appears to be blind to the danger of unbridled spending and unaware of its futility.

Excess Profits Taxes

President Roosevelt has called upon Congress to pass a "steeply graduated excess profits tax" to be applied without discrimination to individuals and corporations. He rightly believes it to be the duty of the Administration and Congress to see that the "tax burden is equitably distributed according to ability to pay, so that a few do not gain from the sacrifices of the many." Every effort should be made to prevent anybody from making a fortune from Government defense outlays.

Whatever the basis of taxation or the schedule of rates, exactions must not be so heavy as to prevent manufacturers from obtaining satisfactory profits that offer them inducements to further the rearmament program.

It is also necessary, in computing income for tax purposes, to make liberal allowances for the rapid obsolescence of plants devoted to production of goods for defense. Otherwise businessmen would be unwilling to make necessary capital outlays for plant extensions, fearing that they would, in a few years, be left with useless equipment on hand.

These and many other difficult problems are no doubt being considered by the Treasury's tax experts who have been called upon to prepare an excess profits tax measure for the consideration of Congress.

It has been pointed out that the tax can be applied to 1940 incomes if enacted prior to next March 15. There is consequently no need for hasty action, although, if the tax is to be retroactive, Congress should not wait too long. For the prospect of a retroactive tax levied upon profits makes it extremely difficult for businessmen to plan for the future or to cooperate whole-heartedly with the Government in carrying out the defense program.

U. S. Dilemma

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hear speculation and rumors that the war will be over in a few weeks, at the most before the November elections.

Let not the "isolationists" nor the "insulationists" deceive themselves by the comforting thought that our worries shall then be over. They will have just begun.

The necessities of national defense are going to affect mightily our tax burden, but our standard of living is going to be more surely threatened by European salesmen offering goods at ridiculous prices because manufactured by political slaves at fractions of the American wage. We cannot and will not trade with a Nazified Europe on Hitler's terms.

Will we want to prevent, or can we prevent, the exploitation of the South American market by the Nazi economic Colossus?

Will we be able to maintain the status quo for Britain, France and the United States in the Far East?

We shall not be able to answer either of these questions in the affirmative if we rely upon our own military show of strength in both situations.

Let us therefore prepare ourselves for the "stabilizing" that Japan will shortly undertake in the Far East and let us with realism face the fact that the defense of this hemisphere economically and militarily outweighs any considerations of "protecting" interests 6,000 to 10,000 miles across the Pacific.

Empire Of The Air

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Early in the nineteenth century Thomas Carlyle translated into English from the German novelist, Jean Paul Richter, the following words:

"Providence has given to the French the empire of the land; to the English that of the sea; to the Germans that of—the air!"

Although these words doubtless referred to the air-mindedness of the Germans, rather than to their Messerschmidts of a hundred years later, it is amazing and deeply ironic that, 113 years later, these words should coincide with the background for the second great war. ANNA K. MOLSTER.

Future Of Exports

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems that the average citizen worries more about the inevitable (?) Nazi victory as a threat to democracy and our way of life than anything else. Yet, more ominous will be its threat to our economic stability—whatever there is of it. The United States Chamber of Commerce states that in 1938 the United States exported approximately $1,300,000,000 worth of manufactured goods to Europe and $300,000,000 to South America. Our best European customers, contrary to general opinion, are the class B and C powers such as Rumania, Sweden, Norway, Holland, etc. The class A powers, being strictly industrial nations, are our competitors, not our customers. The same source also estimates that there are more than 4,000,000 workers in the United States who depend entirely upon the returns of our exports for their livelihood.

Should Germany win the war, it will be able to dominate completely that part of the European market which concerns us most. Because of the totalitarian governments' low cost of production and their proximity, they will be able to practically annihilate our exports of manufactured goods. In time the South American market would be to a great extent closed to us, too.

With such a great amount of America's exports curtailed, and because of the fact that our surplus is too great to permit us to consume that which in the past has been manufactured for foreign consumption, the jobs of these 4,000,000 workers will be imperiled. To what extent it is hard to say. But if past figures can be used in order to forecast, the combined exports from the United States to Europe and South America in 1938 amounted to over one-half of the total exports from the United States in that year. The obvious answer is: If our exports are cut in half (which is wishful calculation), then either one-half of America's export workers will be sans jobs or else they will all have one-half the work, and, consequently, one-half the pay. WM. BILLIKEN.

Use Of Capital

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dorothy Thompson's recent articles indicate the urgent need for an early demonstration that democracy and capitalism can be a complete success. Success does not lie in increased production of armaments if failure of general production and consumption will continue after the discontinuance of the production of armaments. This would be merely a delay in the ultimate reckoning with failure. If we would have the world accept our principles we must demonstrate their success at all times. The politicians are criticized because of their failure to accept new principles that will not perpetuate past failures, but other than expressing a desire for the adoption of principles of success, the critics also advance no practical ideas.

What every individual wants is opportunities to develop to the fullest extent of his capacity, but not a requirement to develop in fields prescribed by dictatorship. Only a successful democracy can give such opportunities. Its failure inevitably will be followed by growing demands for its destruction. Where does the remedy lie? Not in what men in business do or might do and not in what government does or might do in a detailed treatment of the many symptoms of failure. The remedy lies in what every individual does or is required to do with the capital which comes into his possession. Capital is used for just three general purposes, namely, taxes, investments and spending, including spending for homes. Excessive use of it for any of these three purposes results in failure. If we wish to encourage the creation of wealth with the resulting employment, the burden of taxation should not be placed as it now is, principally upon those who use their incomes in that creation. Taxation and also investment should be in proportion to income. A. K.

A Prediction

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With all the peoples and territory acquired by Germany, and the peoples so acquired analyzed and compelled to work producing food, etc., for the Germans, Germany cannot be defeated by a blockade with the idea of starving her into submission.

As a matter of historical fact a nation that is economically self-sustaining cannot be defeated except by defeat of her armies in the field. This is illustrated in the case of Napoleon. It was not the blockade by Britain and her successes on the seas that finally defeated him, but the destruction of his army at Waterloo by Britain and her Allies, which was made possible by the previous victory of the Allies on land, that was due largely to Napoleon's invasion of Russia in which he lost 1,000,000 men, resulting in his banishment to Elba. No doubt that Britain's naval victories and her blockade contributed to his ultimate defeat, but which they could not have accomplished alone.

It is very doubtful if Germany can successfully invade and conquer England, nor can the British invade Germany with all ports of entry in continental Europe in the hands of Germany.

If these premises are well founded the war will continue in one form or another for years, with the probability that there will be many national realignments to the advantage of Britain by making possible the invasion of Germany that will, with the assistance she will get from the United States, give her the ultimate victory over the German armies.

Rumania's Claim to Bessarabia

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The invasion of Bessarabia and Bukovina by the Communist armies has undoubtedly attracted more attention to Rumania than ever before.

But the lack of knowledge of Rumania and its problems on the part of the American press has created an indifferent state of mind here as to the justice of the Rumanian claims to possession of these two provinces.

Inasmuch as so many false and misleading statements have been made by partisan writers may I, as the American representative of the Bucharest daily, Porunca Vremii, present a few facts in connection with the history and ethnology of these two provinces.

The very name Bessarabia, denotes its Rumanian origin, for it is named after the Rumanian princely family, the Basarab, which also ruled the two Rumanian provinces of Wallachia and Moldavia.

Both Bessarabia and Bukovina formed a part of the province of Moldavia, from which they were forcibly taken by Russia and Austria respectively.

Bessarabia has always been in Rumanian possession since the Middle Ages with sole exception of the Mongol invasion, the Turkish domination and was Russian only from 1812 to 1918, a period that did not suffice to eradicate the predominant Rumanian majority.

The Encyclopedia Brittanica gives the Ukrainian element a scant 20 per cent of the total population of Bessarabia, yet in spite of this fact the Communists claim the province in order to incorporate this Ukrainian minority in "The Communist Paradise." Undoubtedly, the Ukrainians were not consulted in this move.

The fertile Ukraine was not even Russian until the time of Peter the Great. Previously the Ukrainian steppes were ruled by roving bands of independent Cossaks and Tartars who continually fought against the expansion of the Muscovites to the South. In fact, Russian expansion reached the Black Sea only in the eighteenth century.

I say with conviction, that if one would study not the Rumanian but the pre-war Czarist and Austro-Hungarian statistics, then no one could deny that all the Rumanian provinces are predominantly Rumanian and that their dismemberment would create infinitely greater minority problems than those now in existence. France Capitulates

MY MIND was too full of the war, and I sought to free myself of the memory of France's defeat by leaving my room and sitting in the Dupont Circle Park on this still Sunday.

It was the kind of day that people speak of as rare, especially for Washington days. The moisture seemed to have gone out of the air, leaving it warm, yet full of an uplifting coolness. It was like the early August weather of New England, just before the fields begin to hunger for autumn.

I set my mind to observe: A little girl in a red dress, much too large for her, wobbled across the grass after a gray kitten. A woman stopped to speak intently to the man she was walking with. Someone dressed in a shabby gray suit drifted across the cement walk. He glanced at me hesitantly, then passed by. Suddenly some pigeons flew down from the housetops into the park. They began to peck at the bread crumbs which a lady was throwing to them. I remembered thinking that much of the throb in my brain was gone. Things were peaceful. A bee buzzed across the grass. On the other side of the circle each single leaf of each single tree seemed suspended in the clean washed air, and the hot, sweet smell of grass and clover hung in the breeze.

THE NOISE of a man shouting broke the stillness. Nervously, I turned with the others to see what was going on. Across the street, on Connecticut avenue, one man was pursuing another with shouts of "Stop thief!" and "Help, stop him!" In a moment, several of us who had been sitting on the benches dashed across the street and instinctively joined the chase. He caught up with the man he was trying to stop, who struck at him and ran on. We saw him turn down Q street, and we all ran faster.

As we rounded the corner we almost ran into the two of them, for they had stopped, and were struggling. Two men joined the fray, and in a moment the man who had sought to escape was subdued. He was a long, lanky person with a deeply reddened face and neck, brown hair streaked with gray, which made the brown take on a yellow hue. His eyes, deeply set, suggested the color of his hair. He was breathing heavily.

He had robbed the till of the Postal Telegraph Co., it was said, and the telegrapher, who now held on to one of the man's wrists, was the one who chased and caught him.

WE STOOD THERE, waiting for the police to come, and I had an opportunity to observe the man. I did so, carefully. His face was smoothly shaven, but his shirt was buttonless and soiled. His gray suit was shabby. There were two large holes in the seat of his trousers, and his shoes looked as if they were ready to come apart. The men who were holding his wrists pulled his arms out, so that you imagined he was being pilloried.

But he showed no fear. Though the telegrapher was firing questions at him, and upbraiding him for stealing after he had been given some pennies, the man did not say much, nor did the presence of the crowd embarrass him. Because I stood near him, he turned his head and asked me to give him a cigarette. I got one for him, and lit it. Then he asked me if I thought he looked like a thief. I said no, and he nodded, and blew smoke out of the corner of his mouth while he held the cigarette with his lips.

A GIRL IN the crowd became impatient. "Have the police been called?" she asked. Someone said he didn't think they had; so she opened her change purse and searched for a nickel. Then she went across the street to find a telephone booth.

I wondered why I felt no pity for him. Then I think I discovered the answer. He didn't seem to mind. He stood there, interested in what was going on. The incident, the chase, the capture, the people, seemed nothing new to him. This was just another adventure, and he didn't mind.

The police came, and took him away.

The crowd broke up, and I walked along Connecticut avenue, wondering if I should be glad that the war had dulled my emotions so that I felt no pity for yet some more human misery.

AND I thought, O, France, how many times in our barbaric past the pagan hordes had ravished your starlight civilization, and broken the beautiful sweetness of your days, and I felt no pain, only a sense of futility and shame that some day, when I had been long dead, the hordes would rise again and turn their reddened eyes upon your sun-lit fields.

Our Policies

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: What has happened to the editorial policy of The Post? During the fight over the arms embargo and the generally muddled quibbling about whether we were not interested in Europe's affairs The Post consistently gave evidence that its editors were among the few who then understood the real issues at stake in the world and their effects upon this country.

Recently I have been amazed and disappointed at the flabbiness that has been apparent on your editorial page. Are you now shrinking from the implications of the policies you so intelligently supported a short time ago?

Fair Enough

The V. F. W. Plan

THE EDITOR of a little monthly journal of a post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars offers a suggestion by which the Americans in the Newspaper Guild could vote the Communists bowlegged and, by force of numbers, permanently exclude them from any office above that of latrine orderly which, no doubt, would be allotted to them as a political courtesy.

His proposal is that every veterans' publication in the country—and the V. F. W. has 32 in New York alone—should quality every man who is eligible under the snyster interpretation of the rules of eligibility adopted by the Communists for their own purposes and needle the bolos with their own medicine.

The Communists, it should be remembered, devised a scheme of parachuting into the guild disguised as newspapermen with the object of controlling the guild and eventually of controlling the entire American press through the power of the closed shop. Any Communist or bleeding-heart weekly or improvised fake publication, including foreign language pamphlets and even mimeographed sheets, may qualify editors, contributors and hangarounders under the Communist plan. There is a slight violation of the guild constitution in this procedure, but the Communists have established the precedent for their own benefit and the rescue squads of Americans could insist on the same privilege.

THE GUILD does not enforce guild conditions on Communist publications. It campaigns only against American daily papers having assets and financial responsibility which, at very worst, pay better than the best Communist papers, do not inspect the political beliefs of their employes and provide legitimate living jobs for genuine newspaper workers. The Red nucleus of voting strength resides in publications having little or no physical property and no responsibility. Mock journalists of the Communist bloc thus may exert a voting strength under party discipline far greater than that of a larger group of Americans on daily papers.

The V. F. W. post in question has 532 members who could qualify as journalists under the Communists' pretext by contributing an occasional column or paragraph to their post publication. They would be fake journalists, to be sure, but no less legitimate than many Communists.

TO EXTEND the idea, the American Legion, the Elks, Moose, Eagles and Owls, the Shriners and Knights of Columbus, the Liberty and Antisaloon leagues, the D. A. R. and G. A. R. and thousands of other groups which print occasional bulletins or magazines could qualify countless full-time, part-time and occasional or purely nominal journalists.

Unfortunately, although the Communists' own precedent would permit this grim burlesque of the original and forgotten purpose of the guild, the actual perpetration of such a well-intended fraud would churn the affairs of the guild into absurd confusion. Possibly, however, the suggestion that this stratagem has been seriously proposed by a patriotic group will result in a revision of the rules at the Memphis convention in July and a stricter application of the revised rules so as to exclude Communist parachutists after now.

THE SUGGESTION is earnestly recommended to patriotic groups. The Communist bosses of the guild will try to turn them off, but if they persist they can force their way in by the door which the Communists opened to admit their comrades.

The guild constitution admits "any person gainfully employed in and devoting the major part of his time to an editorial, business, circulation, promotion or advertising department, or kindred groups of employes, of a news publication." A dollar a year is gain, any activity is employment, and the guild's interpretation of the term "news publication," thanks to the Communists, is such that a typewritten sheet may be so classified. "The major part of his time" might be an obstacle but for the fact that the Communists do not enforce this requirement on their comrades.

Why France Lost War

By Taylor Henry.

Associated Press Staff Writer

No Spirit, No Arms

San Sebastian, Spain, July 1.

FRANCE WENT to war against Germany last September without adequate man power and—it can now be said frankly—without adequate enthusiasm.

Result: Utter defeat in a month-long blitzkrieg, casualties estimated at 1,500,000 killed, wounded or missing; a stunned nation only now beginning to realize what happened, a stunned leadership grimly groping toward the future.

This is the picture of France as I saw it, broken under the wheels of total war.

Two months ago the French army was considered the most efficient military machine in the world. But on June 12, when France took the tragic decision to sue for peace, Gen. Weygand is reported to have told the French cabinet that the army had ammunition enough to last only three more days; that the advancing Germans were "slaughtering men who no longer have the means to defend themselves."

The cabinet members wept. But only now is the country at large beginning to realize the magnitude of the catastrophe.

Veteran Marshal Henri Petain and their leaders admit now there were three principal reasons for the collapse:

Lack of equipment, lack of man power and lack of determination.

PETAIN DESCRIBED this lack of determination as due to the fact that, while in 1914 Frenchmen rallied enthusiastically to the colors, they failed to respond enthusiastically to the call of 1940, "because they did not understand the reasons for the war."

Also dampening the enthusiasm of Frenchmen was the feeling that they were bearing the brunt of the war, with 48-year-old men in the front line at a time when Britain had not yet mobilized her 28-year-olds.

There was a great lack of Allied man power in France. Ten British divisions fought there in 1940, as against 85 in 1918, and the Italian divisions which might have immobilized an equal number of German divisions at the Brenner frontier, were this time on the enemy's side, immobilizing French divisions on the Alpine border.

Lack of equipment unfortunately was greatest in aviation and tanks—precisely the arms on which Germany based the blitzkrieg.

Petain admitted German air superiority was 6-to-1. I saw, repeatedly, three or four French fighters rise to attack massed squadrons of 60 to 80 German bombers protected by 40 to 60 chasers.

The Germans could hurl 300 and 400 planes against a 5-mile French sector. The entire French attack aviation numbered only 510 planes.

GERMANY'S TANKS were concentrated against narrow sectors to gain maximum effect. The French scattered theirs all along the front—and they had scarcely half as many tanks as the Germans, to begin with; perhaps 2,500 tanks against a probable 6,000 thrown into the Battle of France by Hitler.

Even their relatively small tank strength was not entirely modern. I saw 1918-model French tanks in action along the Meuse.

As for antitank defense: Just east of Rethel, two days before the Germans began their general offensive along the Somme-Aisne Line, the commanding general of a division remarked to me proudly: "All my division has been completely installed except my antitank company."

The French were too few. They were inadequately equipped. They went to war with too little enthusiasm. Nevertheless they fought bravely. Brutally awakened from the dream of stationary war in a streamlined Maginot habitation, the French soldier faced his enemy, took terrific punishment and died gamely.

The Political Consequences Of Willkie's Nomination

BY THE NOMINATION of Wendell Willkie the Republicans have removed foreign policy and national defense from the arena of partisan politics: therefore, there has disappeared the reason which would have compelled Mr. Roosevelt to run for a third term and the only reason which would have justified this departure from American tradition.

It will soon be evident, I believe, that the Nation has been saved from an internal disaster of disunion and demoralization which would have paralyzed the Government in the face of the mounting external dangers in the Pacific, in South America, and in Europe. For had the country been subjected to a four-months campaign fought on the issue of foreign policy and the third term the result could only have been tragic and ruinous. The debate would have been degrading in that the two parties would have been driven into a competition in demagoguery, into a vicious spiral of hysterical appeal to fear and selfishness, and in the end no matter who won the election, the United States would have lost it.

NOTHING WAS PLAINER after the first three days at Philadelphia than that only the nomination of Willkie could unite the Republican Party and provide a means by which the nation could be united. The struggle over the platform proved that conclusively. The platform is a hash of meaningless words because Willkie's opponents tried to draft a platform which would make it impossible for the convention to nominate him. The maneuver did not succeed because it was resisted even within the platform committee and much more, of course, among the masses of the Republicans.

Thus the platform had to be meaningless because the party was divided and the opposing factions were deadlocked. If then, the convention had failed to break the deadlock by nominating Willkie, his supporters would have been profoundly disaffected and in one way or another great masses of them would have turned silently away from the party and even openly to the Democratic Party. There was a deep conviction in the Willkie movement which could not have been suppressed by the discipline of ordinary party regularity.

UNDER THESE circumstances the stage would have been set perfectly for a third term nomination at Chicago. It would have been evident that Mr. Roosevelt was by far the strongest candidate that the Democrats could nominate. He would have had behind him not only almost the whole of the Democratic Party but to a very large number of Republicans he would have represented, whatever their other feelings about him, the only available candidate who understands the world we are living in. Colonel Stimson and Colonel Knox are by no means the only Republicans who would have felt that they had no other choice but to work with the President, and there would almost surely have developed some sort of fusion movement among Republicans and Democrats.

The rule against the third term is a rule which ought never to be broken except when the vital interests of the nation are at stake. There would have been a very large number of Republicans and conservative Democrats who would have felt that the vital interests of the nation are at stake, and that the rule had to be broken because the alternative to Mr. Roosevelt was a candidate who could not be depended upon to understand and then to protect the vital interests of the country. They would have said that if in 1864 Lincoln had been completing his second term, a third nomination would have been necessary if the other candidates were men who were not sure where they stood on the great issues of the day.

YET OBVIOUSLY it would have been appallingly dangerous to enter a campaign which saw Mr. Roosevelt running for a third term against a disrupted Republican Party and amidst partisan clamor about the most delicate and explosive issues in foreign affairs. That is what the country has escaped because of Mr. Willkie's nomination.

Now it is no longer necessary for Mr. Roosevelt to accept the nomination which the Chicago convention will offer him. No one can now pretend that Mr. Roosevelt is the only Presidential candidate available who understands the national interest and is determined to organize the country to protect its national interest. On the other hand, it is evident that if Mr. Roosevelt now accepts a third nomination, he will have injected into the campaign an issue which will divert and divide the nation at a time when unity is indispensable.

And this disunion will have been brought about not because it was necessary to take a stand on the fundamental issues of foreign policy and national defense but for unworthy and unimportant reasons connected with the Democratic Party or the New Deal or even personal ambition.

The shoe is now on the other foot. It would have been unpatriotic of the Republicans to make foreign policy a partisan issue; it would now be unpatriotic for the Democrats to disrupt the country by a useless and destructive conflict over the third term.

IT IS ONLY reasonable to suppose that the logic of the new situation will be clear to Mr. Roosevelt, and that as a matter of principle and of personal inclination he will choose not to run again. As a matter of principle how could he justify a campaign for a third term against a candidate who on the paramount issues of the day has the same fundamental principles and convictions? As a matter of practical politics how could he go to the people arguing that he alone can organize the national defense and that Mr. Willkie will not or cannot? As a matter of personal inclination is it not evident that after eight years of unprecedented strain, no man could hope still to have the fresh energy which the next four years will demand?

On what ground can it now be argued that Mr. Roosevelt must break the third term tradition, must engage in a campaign of fictitious charges against Mr. Willkie, must deplete his strength and confuse his judgment. In the six critical and historic months during which he will still be President of the United States Mr. Roosevelt will need all his strength, all his poise, and the undivided respect and loyalty of the people. As a candidate he would sacrifice all those things at a time when his real task is to finish worthily his second term. The hardest period of that term will be the remaining six months of it.

TO RUN AGAIN now would be to descend from being President in a great moment of history to being a partisan candidate. For the only ground on which acceptance of a third nomination can now be promoted is on partisan, factional, and personal grounds. And that is in these times no ground at all.

District NYA Gets $278,906 For Out-of-School Program

The District of Columbia NYA has been allotted $278,906 out of a total national 1940-41 allocation of $67,884,000 for the NYA's out-of-school work program, Administrator Aubrey Williams announced yesterday.

The local funds will be fed into existing projects and such new ones as may be developed. The Administration, during the year, will lay increasin emphasis on projects that provide work experience and basic training in mechanical pursuits, Williams said.

Such experience will "better prepare young men and women for jobs in those industries in which employment will expand as a result of increased production for national defense," it was stated.

Expansion in the health field is anticipated. Several hundred thousand young people have received physical examinations through the program. In cooperation with local medical officers, follow-up treatments have been arranged.

The NYA now is operating 1,632 shops. Among these are woodworking, automotive, airplane, metal and mechanical, radio and electrical and related work, employing 38,327 young people. Without further equipment, present facilities can be expanded to give shop employment and experience for 73,930 persons, it was said.

The types of employment to be conducted in the 1941 fiscal year include construction and repair of public buildings; shop, metal and mechanical work; construction and repair of streets and highways; improvement of public buildings grounds; public health and hospital work; conservation and establishment of recreational pursuits.

The G. O. P. Candidate

The Republican Party is going to bat this year with a candidate who is a "natural" in screen and air waves. Whatever happens in this campaign, the public is going to see a radio battle that will not be too one-sided.

Wendell Willkie could almost campaign under the slogan "From Radio Program to White House." He made his biggest hit in a radio debate and topped it off with a command performance on "Information, Please." Before this campaign is over he may qualify as a guest star on a Fireside Chat program.

For years the Republican Party has made it almost compulsory for a candidate to lack charm, oomph and good looks. A Republican convention seemed to pick men whose faces wouldn't clash with any of the faded photographs in the 1887 issue of "Who's Who in American Banking."

All you had to do to become positively out of the running at a G. O. P. convention was to smile happily, look natural or wear your hat over one ear. The old-time leaders would look at a promising candidate with a radiant personality and say, "We could never nominate a man like that. He hasn't soured enough."

They always seemed to concentrate on favorite sons whose facial expressions indicated a life largely devoted to worrying too much.

When Wendell Willkie came along with an infectious smile, a natural air of perfect ease, a rough and tumble manner and a tendency to be photographed with his hat poked back over his head, it shocked the old-timers, who charged him with being a Democrat. They couldn't see how any Republican could seem that carefree and be not only a Republican but a Republican businessman.

But the public reacted to Willkie's "between-the-halves-at-the-football-game" personality like a schoolgirl to a double feature with a sextette of Clark Gables.

The Republicans tried to stop him, but it was like trying to get a young girl to walk out on Cary Grant and put in the rest of the afternoon in the Egyptian Museum.

Franklin D. Roosevelt has been the greatest radio President the country ever saw, but eight years on the air has killed plenty of good programs. And Wendell Willkie seems to have everything Franklin had, with youth and more hair added.

It still dazzles us. Four years ago a businessman couldn't have won a Republican nomination for fish warden. To the question: "Is there a life after an honest career in a successful business?" there was a loud "No!" But here is the Republican Party going against Roosevelt with a candidate who has made good in industry, faced facts, balanced his books and never read: "How to Live Beyond Your Means in Three Simple Lessons."

It still seems incredible.

Brazil Broke Nazi Plot

Saved Her Neighbor

Montevideo (Tuesday), July 2 (AP).—The Uruguyan Senate approved early today after a four-hour session a bill authorizing compulsory military service and sent the measure to the Chamber of Deputies.

Observers predicted the lower house would approve the bill without great discussion.

Although the measure provoked a public clamor when first proposed, resistance apparently has died down in the wake of an official investigation which disclosed allegedly extensive Nazi activities.

MONTEVIDEO, JULY 1.

IT WAS LEARNED today that Brazil helped Uruguay escape only by the narrowest of margin the serious "fifth column" revolt supported by Nazi organizations early in June. Brazil not only gave the Uruguayan government the first warning of the revolt plot but shipped arms and ammunition into Uruguay and mobilized its own troops along the frontier, ready to assist Uruguay to put down any uprising.

Some details of this hitherto carefully guarded secret were learned from unimpeachable sources close to the Uruguayan government today. Other details were confirmed by equally reliable quarters within the Latin-American diplomatic corps here. Both sources agree that Uruguay's situation during the first two weeks of June was much more serious than has so far been admitted.

There seems to have been a close connection between this fifth column plot and the discovery on May 29 of details of a Nazi plot to seize Uruguay as a colony of the Third Reich. It was known the United States had dispatched the cruiser Quincy to Montevideo following reports of a Nazi threat on Uruguay, and there seems to have been a hurried attempt by fifth column leaders, at least three of whom are prominent Uruguayan politicians, to overthrow the Baldomir government and set up a regime friendly to the Nazis before the American war vessel could reach Uruguayan waters. It is reported that this plot was being worked out in the interior in close collaboration with Nazi leaders who were prepared to support the movement.

THE FIRST REPORT of this plot is said to have been given to the Uruguayan authorities by the Brazilian government which had learned of it through efforts that were being made to get the support of certain Germans in Southern Brazil. The Brazilian Minister to Montevideo then flew to Rio de Janeiro to persuade the Brazilian government to ship rifles, machine-guns and ammunition into Uruguay. A large quantity of munitions was dispatched immediately to Uruguay as a result of this request.

On May 31, the Uruguayan cabinet asked Congress for an appropriation of 7,500,000 pesos for the purchase of arms. This appropriation was voted June 18 without the usual committee report or any technical study when the deputies were informed in cloakrooms by members of the special committee investigating Nazi activities, that the arms it was desired to purchase, had already arrived in the country.

On June 6 before the Brazilian arms had been shipped the Uruguayan Minister of defense placed military guards at all railroad stations, junctions, telegraph stations and other strategic points.

The fifth column revolt plot collapsed when the leaders learned that the government was on guard. It is generally believed, however, that the plot has only been delayed and has not been definitely defeated. It has been persistently rumored in political circles that some important development could be expected whenever the American warships leave Montevideo. Neither American naval officers nor the United States Legation will admit, however, that these rumors have had anything to do with the cruiser Quincy being detained here until the Wichita's arrival, instead of sailing June 25 as had been announced.

Newspapers are clamoring for an official investigation of the recent arrival of nearly 200 German "tourists." They are all well supplied with funds but show no interest in sightseeing and other usual tourists' diversions, nor do they live at hotels. They went directly to the homes of Germans known to be Nazi enthusiasts.

Adjournment Unwise

By Mark Sullivan

Congress And The Crisis

IT IS PROPOSED that Congress adjourn until January.

At a time when all over the world the very existence of parliamentary government—government by a representative elected body—is in question; when it is claimed that parliamentary government must die because it is too cumbersome, too dilatory, too lacking in quick responsiveness; when in country after country parliamentary government is extinguished to make way for totalitarian government—at such a time it is proposed that the American Congress efface itself for six months.

If Congress effaces itself for six months just ahead, Congress should not be surprised to find some of its temporary self-effacement last longer than Congress intended. That is a strong thing to suggest. In face of the present condition of the world, such an apprehension is not too greatly exaggerated. For Congress to go home now would be regular; it is usual for a Congress to adjourn from midsummer to the following January. But for this Congress to adjourn at this time, considering the condition of the world, would have the nature of abdication, or at least of Congress taking its function lightly. The present state of the world is no time for parliamentary bodies to suspend functioning, even temporarily. It is a time for parliamentary bodies to function with especial watchfulness and thoroughness, to prove that they deserve to survive.

DURING THE SPRING, preceding the dramatic turn which the war abroad took on May 11, it was assumed that Congress would adjourn before the Republican National Convention and remain adjourned until January. With the spirit of crisis which came with the German invasion of Holland, Belgium and France; with our embarking upon a program of preparedness, question was raised whether Congress should adjourn. President Roosevelt at a press conference expressed the belief there was no imperative necessity for Congress to stay in Washington; he said, rather lightly, that there was little they could do other than speechmaking, and that if necessity arose, he would call them back in special session.

But in Congress and throughout the country, the conviction grew that Congress should remain in session. When the Republican convention neared, Congress recessed for the week of the convention, returning Monday of this week. Again it is proposed that as the Democratic convention approaches, two weeks hence, Congress should again either recess or adjourn. If recess, Congress would return after the Democratic convention; if adjournment, it would be until January.

To many members, adjournment appeals. The whole House and one-third the Senate are up for reelection (except such as have failed of renomination or are retiring voluntarily). All are conscious of the desirability of making personal campaigns in their States and districts. If constituents understand the desirability of Congress remaining in session, they will not be likely to penalize members unable to make personal campaigns.

THE DESIRABILITY of Congress remaining in session is suggested by an episode during last week's recess. Our Navy, acting with the best intention, with a disposition shared by much of the country, took a step of a kind likely to be helpful to Britain. Certain vessels under construction for our Navy were turned back to the manufacturer, making it possible for the manufacturer to sell these vessels to Britain. Our Navy, of course, supposed it had the right to do this. But when the action was discovered by a committee of Congress, the Senate Naval Committee, question was raised about the legality of the transaction. Upon injuiry, the Attorney General reported that the action was not legal. Thereupon President Roosevelt canceled it.

Such incidents, arising in the shadowy area where Executive power and Congressional power overlap, are likely to be numerous during a period of hurried preparedness against war. If Congress is here, and regards a proposed action as wise, Congress can legalize the action. If Congress is not here, necessity for haste by the Executive Department may result in distortion of the relations between Executive and Congress.

There is another reason for not adjourning. This Congress, from the time it first sat in January, 1939, has been engaged, carefully and with moderation, in trimming some of the excesses of authority which were granted to some Governmental bodies during the early days of the New Deal, when earlier Congresses had been rather reckless in their grants of authority. One such action by the present Congress is the Walter-Logan bill, designed to safeguard the rights of the citizens against arbitrary action by agents of Government. This bill has passed the House, by a majority of more than 2 to 1, and with more than half the Democrats voting in favor of it. The bill is now before the Senate. If Congress adjourns, nothing will be done about it. If Congress remains, the bill will be acted upon.

Another example is a group of amendments to the National Labor Relations Act, which would check some practices of the Labor Board. The amendments are indorsed by the American Federation of Labor. These amendments have been passed by the House by a vote of more than 2 to 1, and with more than half the Democrats voting in favor. The amendments are now before the Senate. If Congress remains in session, they will be acted upon. If Congress goes home, they will lapse.

Wish for such restrictions to lapse may be one reason for a disposition in some parts of the New Deal to hope that Congress adjourns.

Russians Announce Accomplishment Of Their Advance

Rumanian territorial integrity and decided that Rumania henceforth must follow "the new orientations of Europe." Some diplomatic quarters interpreted this as strengthening the possibility that King Carol now has a good chance of getting German guarantees against further Soviet encroachments.

[The United Press quoted Bucharest diplomats to the effect that King Carol already accepted German "protection" and that important emissaries had arrived from Berlin. London newspapers, according to International News Service, asserted Germany had counseled Carol to accept the Russian ultimatum last week with assurances that Red occupation would be only temporary.]

The spike-capped Russian troops who are taking over the provinces of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina, which Rumania reluctantly ceded to escape war, poured on in increasing numbers in the wake of the retreating Rumanians.

The Rumanian renunciation of British and French guaranties, given April 13, 1939, moved this Balkan country further under the German political wing and ended a quarter-century of close association with the Western powers.

[Informed London circles described as "a curious gesture" the renunciation of the British-French guarantee. "Rumania did not ask for the guarantee," these sources said. "It was given by Britain unilaterally, and if Britain wished to carry out her promise she would do despite such a renunciation."]

Bucharest was under ominous tension. Guards were redoubled around public buildings and the royal palace.

Further clashes were reported between Rumanian and Russian trops as the Soviet army increased the tempo of its ocupation of the ceded provinces in the north.

200,000 Flee Ceded Area

The capital and railroad stations were full of refugees. Nearly 200,000 residents of Bessarabia and Bucovina managed to cross the border by nightfall, it was announced.

Most of the new class of reservists called up was sent to the Prut River—scene of heavy clashes Sunday—to establish what military men call a "wall of men" against further Russian advances.

In southern Bessarabia, the districts just east of the Prut were teeming with refugees who almost reached old Rumania when their flight was cut off by swift Russian motorized columns. Hundreds spent the night in fields along the roads—weary, exhausted and bitterly disappointed.

Factories, Estates Seized

All factories, business establishments, banks and large estates in Bessarabia and Bucovina were being taken over by the Russian military as fast as men could be assigned to take charge.

A lack of Russian army supplies raised the possibility of an impending critical food shortage in many villages which were called upon to billet large numbers of troops.

The refugees said Rumanian officers made efforts to save army equipment from advancing Russians. But the Russian troops moved so far ahead of schedule it was impossible to get out vast quantities of tanks and other military equipment.

Refugees Drown in Swamp

Near Chilia Nova, the northern fork of the Danube delta, refugees fleeing down the roads and across the fields were reported by eye-witnesses, who escaped, to have been driven into a vast swamp where some were drowned.

The Red Army was reported bringing heavy artillery to the northern bank of the Danube—which it controls. No shipping was moving past this point, from where Germany had expected to get vast stores of grain, sugar and other supplies this year.

Wounded Rumanian soldiers, understood to have been felled in fighting with the Russians on the Prut, arrived in Bucharest by the trainload for hospitalization.

Bulgaria Leans to Reich

Sofia, July 2.—Diplomatic reports from Bucharest said it was an "open question" whether Russian troops will stop their advance at the River Prut or will march into the old kingdom of Rumania.

If Russia crosses into Moldavia or Slovakia, it is generally assumed that the result will be not only a Balkan war but a clash between the Soviet and the Axis. But if Moscow restrains its ambitions to the western fringe of the Prut, it is considered unlikely that Hungary will try to grab Transylvania.

The Bulgarian government is convinced the situation will clear up without another war.

Aukam Accepts It As 'Monument to American Justice'

The new Municipal Court Building, on Third street between E and F streets northwest, was hailed as "a monument to American justice" by speakers at the dedication ceremonies yesterday.

Presiding Judge George C. Aukam, first appointed when the court was established 31 years ago, accepted the building for his colleagues as "a monument to that justice which recognizes no difference between the rights of one creed or race and another, and maintains its balance without regard to the excess pounds of gold which one party litigant may have over another."

Judge Aukam said the new structure was the court's "first real home" in its 31 years of existence. "Respect for law is not enhanced in sordid surroundings," he commented, but added the qualification that the magnificent new structure would be "but an empty shell" unless justice was properly administered there.

Other speakers of the occasion were Solicitor General Francis Biddle, Francis W. Hill, jr., president of the District Bar Association; Sefton Darr, former bar president; Henry Lincoln Johnson, jr., president of the Washington Bar Association, and Mrs. Burnita Shelton Matthews, former president of the Women's Bar Association.

The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Church, made the invocation, and the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, regent of the Georgetown University Law School, pronounced the benediction.

have told Hungary that the time has come.

On War Footing

By the Associated Press

Budapest, July 1.—Hungary was on a war footing tonight and the dispatch of troops into Transylvania—which Hungary lost to Rumania in 1918—was expected momentarily.

Excitement was whipped to fever pitch when the government, protesting to Bucharest against "incidents" on the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier, warned Rumania of "unpleasant consequences" and called up more troops.

Officialdom reemphasized the "mission" of thousand-year-old Hungary as an outpost against the East, and let it be known that Rumania—which has just surrendered part of its territory to the Red army—appeared to be "on the threshold of collapse."

The foreign office admitted Hungary was "preparing for all eventualities."

Reservists flocked to mobilization centers. A full army corps was advancing toward the Rumanian border, officials confirmed.

The government has reiterated often that a Rumanian collapse would call for immediate entry of the Hungarian army into Transylvania to protect the Magyar minority of nearly 2,000,000.

The Russian army's overstepping of the line of demarcation fixed in the Moscow ultimatum to Rumania is causing considerable worry for Hungary as well as Germany and Italy.

Officials have long emphasized that Hungary would seize the Carpathian Mountain barrier in Transylvania for "self-protection" should the Red army persist in advancing toward the Danube Basin. Support of the Rome-Berlin Axis was claimed in this plan. The Hungarian news agency said the Russians already have gone beyond the agreed limits.

The air ministry announced that storage tanks at Hamburg, Germany, were left burning in further raids by the Royal Air Force last night and that British fighters over France shot down five German Messerschmitts and "probably" destroyed another seven.

The British stand on the Near East was taken in order to "set at rest doubts which may be felt in any quarter" after the French commander in the Near East, Gen. Eugene Mittelhauser, declared hostilities ended in Syria.

A foreign office news department statement said:

"His Majesty's government declare that they could not allow Syria or the Lebanon to be occupied by any hostile power or to be used as a base for attacks upon those countries in the Middle East which they are pledged to defend, or to become the scene of such disorder as to constitute a danger to those countries.

"They therefore hold themselves free to take whatever measures they may in such circumstances consider necessary in their own interests."

Britain is pledged to defend Turkey, Egypt, Palestine, Transjordan and Iraq in the Near East. The British term "Middle East" refers to what is known elsewhere as the Near East.

Vice Admiral Muselier, a collaborator of the old "Tiger of France," Premier Georges Clemenceau, in 1917-18, raced to Paris from Bordeaux when he heard of the impending armistice with Germany. Arriving at almost the same time German troops occupied Paris, he managed to destroy several secret plans and one of the national defense factories.

Mary Haworth's Mail

In Sordid Encounter, Man Evens Score With Wife, Who Was Once Unfaithful and Confessed; Frantic With Remorse, He Asks How to Repair His Blunder

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a married man, middle-thirtyish, and the father of three children. I have been reading your column for years and thinking of getting your opinion on my problem. My religion has no father-confessor, so I must turn to you, a stranger and a woman, for help.

My boyhood training was very strict and I avoided all habits and associations that would demoralize my character. I married a good girl. For years we were very happy and two beautiful children came to bless our home, or so I thought. But the children had another effect upon my wife. Beautiful and talented, she resented being enslaved by motherhood's restraints.

A few years ago, she met a man who could offer her far more than I, and she resolved to run away with him. I was willing, if the man were honorable. But he was a rotter, playing the sensual game for pleasure. When I learned that my wife had surrendered to him, I was reluctant to resume our life on the former status of man and wife.

However, her pleas of being a good mother won me over and I consented. Ever since that tragic time she has been a wife in a million. If ever anyone made good a promise, she is that person. Nothing in the world is too great a sacrifice for her to make for the children and me. I, too, have played my part well and the look in her eyes when she sees me coming home from work is the look of a woman in love, happy and completely forgetful of past mistakes.

But not so with me. My theories on moral conduct (the product of early training) kept taunting me all the time. My idol had feet of clay; my hopes and dreams of a stainless marriage were gone. Never by look or word did I convey this to my wife, and she thinks I forgave and forgot long ago. I brooded over the affair at work, and when I was alone. I prayed that God would soften my heart and let me forget, but the thought of my wife in that other man's arms nearly drove me mad.

Now comes the unspeakable part of this whole mess. I don't know how to write it or explain myself. For years I was obsessed with the impulse to even the score. Last month, when I was out of town, perfectly sober and in complete possession of my faculties, I sought the company of a woman of the streets and spent the night with her. This action cleared my mind and showed me what a fool I have been.

My wife fell from grace in a moment of weakness, while rebelling against restraints to her freedom. I see her now as one of the noblest of God's creatures. And I don't consider myself worthy even to kiss her, much less possess her as a wife. If something isn't done, she will realize my anguish of mind. Yet I never could explain away my sin, using her own mistake as the excuse.

Looking back, I think that I must have been mad to want to get even. What shall I do? I can't go on with this thing on my soul. Shall I tell her? No doubt she would forgive me; but she thinks that I am the best man on earth, and she tells me so, with that shine in her eyes that no actress could imitate.

If I tell her, will it ruin her life, as her confession has ruined mine? If I should lose her, life would end for me in more ways than one, because I would take mine. Please think this over and tell me what to do. Your decision will be final. Whatever you say, I will do; because you have seen and heard so much of the sorrow of life that I know you can show me the way.

This is no joke being perpetrated upon your column, but a cry of despair from the soul of a man who is praying for guidance in his hour of need. God grant that you will be kind. And God bless your work. If I had written to you five years ago I know that I would have no need to be writing now. Sincerely,

B. V. S.

Repentance Is Clothed In Action, Not Lament

DEAR B. V. S.: If you were not in an intensely neurotic condition as a result of years of (1) lascivious brooding, and (2) morbidly fascinated probing of an old wound to your self-love, I would advise you to dismiss from mind and erase from conscience the episode with the woman of the streets, because knowing that while it was undertaken with a wrong motive, it had resulted in the most indelible of right lessons.

It has been said, with what profound wisdom you can now appreciate, that the things we do are not so important as what those things do to us, in our spiritual essence. The man who has lastingly learned, through contact with vice, the spiritually essential lessons of personal humility and universal charity, may be forgiven (indeed, has already atoned for) his departure from rectitude. When his thorny experiences have chastened him to the humble practice of true virtue, to him applies the confessional words of absolution, "Go in peace and sin no more."

If the soul-cleansing, spiritually health-giving import of this Christ-expounded philosophy—this immemorial way of salvation—could be so effectively conveyed to you through the medium of my remarks that you would immediately be healed of bitterness, remorse, despair, anguish of mind, fear, etc., and simultaneously possessed of the joyous serenity which characterizes the reborn spirit and purified conscience—then your problem would be already solved. There would be no need to do anything more about it.

You could well say, "God works in a mysterious way His wonders to perform." And without burdening your wife with any re-hash of your tortured blundering, which led to the lightning-stroke of spiritual illumination, you could best atone by giving her, henceforth and from this moment, the authentic, whole hearted, reverent devotion of which your past performance has been but the shadow.

This, in my opinion, is the preferable solution of your problem, since I hold that acceptable repentance is secret and inward, in one's heart, manifesting itself to the world only in nobler actions, not in ignoble lament.

But your habit of introspection may be such as to prevent you from experiencing salvation the instantaneous, absolute way. And in that case, you have need of either spiritual counseling, such as an ordained minister could supply; or of psychological instruction leading to healthy personality-integration, such as a psychiatrist or psycho-analyst is prepared to give. And until you have talked with such an adviser, do not carry your story to your wife; as it may develop, all things considered in the most realistic light, that the spiritual or psychological health of the marriage will be best served by heroic reticence on your part.

In conclusion, I wish to say, in all sincerity and kindness, that you have been making a mountain out of a molehill, by the morbid hysteria of your attitude throughout, which has reached its soul-shattering climax in your present emotional condition of anguished confusion. But psychiatrists tell us that such suffering may be accounted as the soul's growing pains (see Dr. Louis E. Bisch's book, "Be Glad You're Neurotic"), so perhaps it is to your credit, because significant of your potential spiritual reach, that you are so sensitive to moral values.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Beauty Bath Table Designed by Star

Hollywood, Calif.—Olivia de Havilland's new self-designed beauty bath table is indispensable when she has to dress quickly for an evening out.

The table, which fits over the sides of her tub, is complete to mirror, compartments for creams and lotions, manicure tools and other beauty implements.

Olivia just drops scented salts into her tub of warm water, relaxes and receives the benefits of the steam bath while reshaping her nails, grooming her brows, giving herself a quick cleansing facial and performing sundry other beauty rites.

The need for a simple, well-tailored sports cotton is always prevalent in the Washington woman's wardrobe, especially if the fabric is absolutely tub-proof when it goes to the wash. Such a frock is the inexpensive chambray above which has been sanforized to a mere 1 per cent of its shrinkability. Ham Mousse Makes Excellent Summer Entree

COOKS haven't had to worry about hot weather dishes as yet this summer, but that doesn't mean that the temperamental weather man will not break into action at any moment now. Hot weather appetites are poles away from cold ones. Rich, heavy dishes have no lure on humid days. And it is not only appetites that must be catered to, but cooks, too, must have dishes on their list that are simple to prepare, cool to cook.

A cold entree gives a special savor to a meal. Whatever the special combination for this purpose, it should be highly seasoned and of concentrated flavor.

Ham mousse is a dish that has these qualifications. It can be served as the main course at a luncheon or dinner, when the lettuce, escarole or endive are used merely as a garnish. I ate ham mousse Saturday at a luncheon, and know that you will find the recipe for making it a welcome addition to your menus. There is little work to making it, the mechanical refrigerator does the rest. The recipe follows:

Ham Mousse

Soak 1 tablespoon gelatine in 2 tablespoons cold water and dissolve in ½ cup hot water. Add 2 cups cold boiled ham that has been ground fine, then add 1 teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon mustard, ½ teaspoon Worcester sauce, few grains cayenne. Next fold in ½ cup whipped cream and pour into refrigerator tray or into a mold and chill until firm—about 2 hours.

Buttered green peas, popovers, a cold dessert and an iced beverage would be splendid to round out the menu. Or you could get ten of those buttermilk biscuits that come in a carton for 10 cents and pop them in the oven while the peas are cooking. That leaves only the dessert and drink to be prepared. Don't forget that fresh fruit makes a very welcome dessert for the hot days.

These Quiz Programs Are No Cinch, Without A Prepared Script

New York, July 1.

IT WAS A QUIET Sabbath evening, with the church bells trying to compete with the city's thunder, when I went up against another of these quiz menaces on the air. I have no fear of the mike—I will walk right up and punch it on the nozzle when I have a set script, but to move in on a mike cold and have questions fired at you out of the blue is no cinch.

This particular ordeal was held in a Broadway theater before the audience, and the quizzer as old Doc Sig Spaeth, whose tune-detecting was a great radio hit some years back. The other three victims were Raymond Gram Swing, the brilliant news commentator; John R. Tunis, tennis expert and general magazine writer, and a handsome young Mr. Deutsch, just out of college and now pushing a go-buggy around the Fair Grounds.

Poor old Hall, who dies a thousand cruel deaths when I am being probed this way, ran away and hid his head in a Tom Collins. When the half-hour's horror was over, I found I had come in a second, half a length behind Swing, who knows almost everything.

I knew the names of the songs, I crashed through with the name of the housekeeper in "Rebecca," and I had Rip Van Winkle's dog all right. But I fizzled on another dog, and when Hall heard I didn't know that Sidney Carton spoke the line, "It is a far, far better thing that I do than I have ever done," he had another Tom Collins, and stopped speaking to me.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Dropping into the office of Colliers the other day to chin with Aimee Larkin, its woman's editor, about a piece, I found that all work was suspended, and that every typist and secretary in the place had quit the keys and was peeking over a filing cabinet.

It was the work of arf a mo' to discover the cause. Robert Montgomery was just back from his spell of ambulance driving in France, and had come to report to the editor about Quen Reynolds, one of the staff writers. When Bob had told his tale and left, the little ladies went back to the job promptly, hoping the hero-worship wouldn't be clipped out of the lunch hour . . .

Every ex-champion prize fighter opens a restaurant and bar as soon as he is belted out of his title, and all fail. Now the great Jack Dempsey goes on the record, as his famous eating house on Eighth Avenue, opposite Madison Square Garden, shuts up.

Jack has lost his cutie wife, Hannah Williams (No. 3 on his spouse list) and the restaurant, once very popular with visiting firemen. But he still has his health, two girl children, his personal popularity and a cocktail bar and rumba dive on Broadway. So should he fret and stew? . . .

Golf Alone Is Not Sufficient To Insure Streamlined Figure

Special Exercises Necessary for Midriff Section; Those Overweight Must Also Combine Reducing Diet With Game

By Ida Jean Kain

IT SEEMS to this casual observer that some of the women who play golf regularly have very bad figures. Of course, that's not true of all golfers—there are exceptions with as neat and tidy figures as could be found to decorate a green!

But what's the matter with the others? The average golfer is inclined to think her game entitles her to considerably more food and to overcompensate on calories. This is true not only of golf, but of most sports or exercise. Physical activity is simply no match for overeating.

And any of you who are trying to reduce by exercise alone have a long, hard pull ahead of you! To lose one single pound of stored adipose tissue you have to burn up exactly 4,320 calories in energy. You think that is easy? Well, just let me give you a rough idea of how much exercise it takes!

Not to Be Discouraging . . .

As nearly as can be figured, you would have to keep going around the 18-hole course about five times. Or you could lose your pound by playing ping-pong about 17 hours, by sawing wood for 10½ hours or by rowing hard, as if you were racing, for 5 hours!

None of that is intended to discourage you from exercising, but it is a strong argument against overeating with the hope that exercise will even things up. It never will.

The value of exercise is in its tonic effect. What exercise lacks in dealing with the calories it more than makes up for in its beautifying qualities. If I could only get across the ideas that exercise is beautifying but not reducing, and that diet is reducing but not beautifying—we'd get somewhere!

Still Another Reason

There is still another reason why golf does not help you to cut a fine figure in your evening frock. It's good exercise, but it's not streamlining. You get a nice long walk—and there's nothing better for you—and it's fine exercise for the muscles of the legs, arms, shoulders and even the waistline, which benefits from the swinging. But it misses the most important muscles of all, those four pairs of abdominal muscles.

It's only by keeping these midsection muscles in good tone that you can have a really lovely figure. When you get out and play golf so often it may seem useless to take a few specific calisthenics. But if you are determined to have a figure your husband can be proud of you will do it. Perhaps it will help to drive the point home to know that even some of the professionals go to a gym and take these specific exercises to keep up to par in their game!

Forget-Me-Nots

It's a job to try to keep the forget-me-nots blooming all season by picking them—shearing them with scissors is quicker and easier. This decorous little flower used to be called mouse-ear whence comes it other name Myosotis. One of the most amusing legends about this flower is that its juice is fine for tempering fine steel blades; maybe it is for all one knows.

Copying Led To Evolution Of New Arts

Our Worcester China Cited as an Example Of Such Inspiration

By Elizabeth McRae Boykin

IT is well to pause before condemning entirely the penchant of certain nations to copy the arts of others. For that is the way much of our most treasured decorative arts have been created.

Practically all of Europe's great creative eras were directly inspired by the arts from other peoples. First it was the excavations of Greek and Roman ruins that stimulated the brilliant outburst of the Renaissance. Later, it was the treasures from China that poured into Europe in such a rich stream through the Sixteenth, Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries that spurred European designers to new efforts.

Oriental Wares Copied

Specifically, we are thinking of Worcester China, which was created first in an effort to copy Oriental wares. In fact, an ad in the Oxford Journal in 1763 claimed that "services of Chinese porcelain can be made up with Worcester porcelain so that the difference cannot be discovered." And this claim was substantiated in fact.

Though much of the early Worcester was Chinese in shape and design, being the most successful of the imitations of Chinese ware, it gradually evolved other designs and shapes which acquired a character of their own and a mood definitely British. Earliest pieces, as well as modern examples of Worcester, are highly cherished.

The factory was originally established in 1751, by 15 prominent gentlemen of Worcester intent upon bringing a new industry to their city which was then in what we now might call a depression. The new business was set up in an old mansion close to the cathedral and by the following year ads describing modest wares appeared in the Gentleman's Magaine.

Women Played Leading Role

From the first, efforts were made to produce a hard, enduring body and in the beginning soapstone, then, later, bone ash, were added to the paste toward this end. By 1800 a fine hard porcelain paste had been perfected, made of china clay, china stone and bone ash.

It is interesting to recall the part that two early career women played in the development of Worcester china. In 1793 Martha Barr came into the firm after it had gone through various vicissitudes of fortune. Later, in 1807, Martha Barr, the younger, also entered the partnership.

Health Care Important on Vacations

Motorists Should Watch Posture, Learn to Relax

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

My cranky old friend, Dr. Adrian Gibbs, has gone on his vacation. One of his patients asked him what would become of her while he was gone and he replied that she would probably get well.

He scorns the rugged individualist who boasts that he has had only two vacations in 20 years. He says he doesn't really have any vacation then because he never gets away from himself.

Vacations are entirely different from what they were when I was younger. Then the whole family packed up and left on a train. We went to a fishing lodge where the food was good and the water dependable. We got "acclimated" in a day or two—that meant really that elimination became normal.

Different Now

Vacations with the advent of the automobile adventure are cheaper and easier, and more frequent, which is a good thing, but they are more individualistic than they used to be—much more responsibility is in the hands of the vacationist. The engineer and conductor of the train in the old days saw to it that we got there safely. Now the man at the wheel of the car has to assume that duty—so he should be carefully selected. And for himself he ought to learn to sit at the wheel properly so that he doesn't ruin his posture and spine in the effort. And take a little leisure to smoke a cigarette after breakfast; it doesn't make a great deal of difference if you don't get to the next town exactly by 12:20; suppose you don't get there till 12:40. The town will be there just the same.

Every vacationist should have a typhoid vaccination before starting out on the tourist vacation. At least within ten years before. Drinking water is picked up here and there and carries a typhoid hazard. Most of our cases of typhoid today are found in wanderers.

Loaded for Trouble

Dr. Gibbs believes in medicine and antiseptics and bandages, and his medical kit was carried in a separate grip when he left on his vacation. It looked a little as if he were going to join an army at the front. I don't think you need to take as much as he does. But iodine and sterilized gauze and bandages and adhesive are fundamental. And some salve for sunburn; any kind of salve will do—special sun tan salve is not very different from the others.

A bottle of calamine lotion is a good thing for insect bites and dermatitis venenata. Dermatitis venenata is the eruption on the skin from plants. Ivy poisoning is the worst, but there are several other kinds. Plant dermatitis always causes burning and itching. Simple remedies are the most effective. Clean the skin affected—with gasoline and then soap and water before putting on the calamine lotion.

But don't try to have a vacation without some misadventures. The reminiscences of "the time when" are half the fun. You're going away for "re-creation," you know.

Vaccination to Prevent Typhoid Is Recommended

Mexican Art

An important new source of designs, that will be reflected in the fashions of the coming season, is the exhibition "Twenty Centuries of Mexican Art." With Europe and Asia all but closed to American tourists, 'tis said that trend to Mexico and South America is revealing a world really more glamorous and foreign than most formerly popular tourist haunts. For the Spanish speaking countries in the Americas have been all but untouched by the modernization that has given an international air to most of the other great cities of the world.

Fourth of July Heralds Exodus From Capital

Mrs. James Beck Will Be Off Today To Spend Summer at Hot Springs, Va.; Mrs. Churchill Candee to Go to Maine

By Hope Ridings Miller.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING, the town's very much on the move these days, with the summer exodus assuming the usual proportions expected just before the Fourth of July week-end. Mrs. James M. Beck, widow of former Representative Beck, will be off today for Hot Springs, Va., to spend the rest of the summer . . . Mrs. Churchill Candee is in New Yurk for a few days and will go from there to York Harbor, Me., to join her daughter, Mrs. Harold C. Mathews, at her summer home. Mrs. Mathews' house, built in Eighteenth Century style and furnished in keeping with the same period, is one of the showplaces of the resort . . . Mrs. Edward C. Johnson and her daughter, Sue, left by plane Sunday for San Antonio, Tex., where they will be the guests of Mrs. Johnson's father, Col. Taylor Darby, at Fort Sam Houston. Judge Johnson will join his wife and daughter there later in the summer.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER

From Newport comes news that Arthur Bradley Campbell is not the only erstwhile Washington resident who is making the social calendar a lively one. Very much in the partying picture is Mrs. Frederick Mitchell Gould, who is entertaining and being entertained right and left. On Saturday, she gave a large dinner in honor of Mrs. Frederick Johnson, of New York, who has been feted at a number of events since arriving at the Rhode Island resort a few days ago.

Bayberry Land, the Southampton home of Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, was the scene of a house party the past week-end when guests included Senator Federick Hale, of Maine; Mrs. Walter E. Edge, Maj. and Mrs. John A. Warner and Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Wigham.

WEEK-END SOUVENIRS: Taking up where the Philadelphia convention left off, guests at Mrs. Harry Blair's home Saturday evening discussed politics up one side and down the other and spent hours on end speculating whether the Democrats or the Republicans will make the grade in November. The party, incidentally, was planned in honor of Helen Essary, new president of the Women's National Press Club, and Ruby Black, former president. Mrs. Essary, however, turned up missing. Having spent the entire week covering the Philadelphia show, she had to call a halt and take a few days rest. So she scurried off to Rehoboth Beach, where her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tilden Ansell, jr., and their new daughter (also Mrs. Essary's namesake) are established for the summer.

But the party went on as planned. And a gayly informal event it was—with supper served on the terrace beneath a huge spreading apple tree and guests drawing up chairs to a "conversational circle" that soon turned into a political forum. A few hours before, Miss Black had completed the book she has been writing about Mrs. Roosevelt. It's to be published in the autumn.

Mrs. Blair, who had planned to be off Sunday for the Land o' Lakes region, where she and Judge Blair have an island all their own, has postponed her departure for a few days. However, this week's end will find both Judge and Mrs. Blair on their way westward, where they will join their daughter, Mrs. N. M. Forsythe, and her three children. They already have set up housekeeping on the island for the summer.

SEEMS AS IF there has been a party for Helen Drury practically every day since she returned from Florida. Especially pleasant was the one given for her on Saturday afternoon when Mrs. James D. Cunningham gathered in a sizable number of friends "for a mint julep."

The guest of honor, who has a record for wearing some of the most attractive hats you see around this town, had chosen a stunning natural straw number, wide-brimmed and becomingly titled, trimmed with a spray of red velvet blossoms and worn with a beige frock. Mrs. Cunningham had donned a smart gypsy effect costume, made with a chartreuse blouse and a paisley skirt. Assisting her was Mrs. Clifford McClain, and among the guests were Commander and Mme. Araujo, Rafal Lepkowski, Paul Hasslocher, Mr. and Mrs. Verne Simmons, Mrs. William B. Shearer, Max Dunlap, Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Goutheir and Edward Weintal.

POTPOURRI: Did you know that Lieut. Comdr. Paul E. Pilh, assistant naval attache for our Embassy in Berlin, is married to Wendell Willkie's sister? It seems Pilh was an Annapolis classmate of Edward Willkie (Wendell's brother) and that both were graduated from the Naval Academy in 1921. Shortly thereafter Edward resigned his commission, went to Europe and was soon established in business in Brussels. Friends recall that his name got on the rolls at Annapolis with only one "l" in Willkie. "Just let it go," he is said to have said. "It doesn't make any difference, anyway." And so he was known throughout his college career as Edward Wilkie.

Women's Overseas Service League to Hear Discussion Of Refugee Conditions Now and in Last Conflict

Mrs. Jerome Stenger, Who Fled Paris With Her Two Sons, to Tell of Plight Of Victims of Modern War

The Post's Club Editor.

Refugees of the present war in Europe will be contrasted with those of the war in which members of the Women's Overseas Service League did their bit by Mrs. Jerome Stenger in an address today before the convention luncheon of the national league at the Mayflower Hotel.

Herself a refugee from Paris with her two sons, while her husband remains "somewhere in France" with United States Ambassador Bullitt, Mrs. Stenger brings back vivid pictures of the hordes of refugees that choked the roads. She will contrast their condition with those of refugees as members of the league knew them. She and her sons are visiting at the home of Mrs. Charles E. Randall, of McLean, Va., with whom she enlisted in World War work with the National Catholic War Council.

Mrs. Stenger will replace on today's program Mrs. Dwight Davis, who had been previously announced as one of the speakers. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, a member of the local unit, also will speak, as will Dr. Barclay Acheson, associate editor of The Reader's Digest, who was to have addressed the league's patriotic meeting Sunday night at the Wardman Park Theater but was unavoidably detained in New York.

Pershing, Summerall Extend Greetings

The formal opening of the business sessions of the convention yesterday at the Wardman Park Hotel, with Miss Ruth McClelland, of Washington, national president, presiding, was marked by the reading of greetings from Gen. John J. Pershing and Gen. Charles P. Summerall, former chief of staff of the Army.

Gen. Pershing expressed "an appreciation of the services rendered by the ladies of the league to our armies in France that the passing of years will never dim."

Gen. Summerall, who has been present at many of the previous conventions of the league, said in his message: "Your organization has fulfilled a patriotic duty in keeping alive the tradition of those days of glory when America rescued civilization from barbarism. The time may soon come when others must take the torch from your hands and hearten the manhood of another generation on the fields of Armageddon. Thus, your spirit will live on and the nobleness in others will rise."

Among the distinguished members of the league from whom messages were read was Mrs. Herbert Hoover, who said: "Now as there is repeated the growing need for just such services as you rendered 20 years ago, we all long to see something succeed in saving the sad world from further war."

Ruth Bryan Rohde sent a message from Alderson, W. Va., in which she referred to the "strong bond which unites all of us who saw service in the first World War."

Mabel Boardman Sends Message

From Miss Mabel Boardman came the message: "There is no group in the country today to whom the sufferings of war can be more vivid than to the members of the Women's Overseas Service League—today in all the welter of misery that exists, there is a ray of comfort in the thought that there is still some kindliness, some pity, and some mercy left in the world, and that all these are visibly symbolized by the Red Cross."

Following the closed business sessions yesterday morning, there was a luncheon at the Wardman Park Hotel. The delegates were seated in groups according to the corps areas in which their units were located, giving them opportunity to discuss sectional problems. A drive through Rock Creek Park in the afternoon was climaxed by tea at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Steinke. Dinner at the Army-Navy Country Club later was followed by a bus tour of the Capital by night.

The luncheon this afternoon, after the morning business session, will be followed by a trip to Mount Vernon and to historic spots in Alexandria. Tea will be served at Dumbarton Oaks, where Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, a member of the Washington Unit of the league, will receive the delegates.

Tomorrow the report of the resolutions committee and election of officers are scheduled for the morning, a reunion luncheon, followed by a tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the afternoon. A banquet at the Wardman Park in the evening, with Brig. Gen. William Bryden, Deputy Chief of Staff of the Army, as the guest speaker, will close the convention.

Railway Mail Auxiliary Head Confers Here

Mrs. E. C. Enbody Makes Official Visit To Local Group

Mrs. E. C. Enbody, of Minneapolis, national president of the Women's Auxiliary to the Railway Mail Association, is here making an official visit to the local auxiliary and conferring with national officers at the headquarters of the association.

Today she will be guest of honor at a luncheon to be given by the local organization at Tilden Gardens. Mrs. William M. Collins, both the national historian and local president, will preside.

Mrs. Collins has been a member of the auxiliary for 40 years. She joined as a member at large when her husband was the railway mail clerk in charge of the Watertown junction between Chicago and Minneapolis. Later he left that post to become executive secretary and then national president of the Railway Mail Association, with headquarters here—an office he held from 1921 until his death in 1936.

The Women's Auxiliary has a membership of more than 6,550 in 130 local groups, which are classified in 15 divisions, as is the postal service.

The auxiliary carries on various activities of value to its members. This year the civil service committee, of which Mrs. C. H. J. Miller, of Washington, is chairman, is assembling information on compensation and retirement laws as they apply to civil service employes and their families, so as to acquaint all the younger members with the provisions.

The special project of the auxiliary, not allied with the program of the ascociation, is its scholarship loan fund. This was established in 1919 and since has been administered to aid sons and daughters of railway mail clerks to complete their education in cases where some special need has curtailed the family finances. Any son or daughter of a member of the Railway Mail Association who is a high school graduate may make application for a loan. An allowance of $100 a semester is made. It is a revolving fund to which all the individual auxiliaries contribute. The Washington group gives $50 a year.

Mrs. Enbody is on an extended trip which has already included visits to the organizations in Dubuque, Iowa; St. Louis, Memphis, Birmingham, Atlanta, Chattanooga, Nashville, Knoxville, Asheville, Salisbury and Greensboro, N. C.; Roanoke and Richmond, Va. From here she will go to Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York and, on her return West, will stop at Columbus and Chicago.

Society Elects Baltimore Girl

Miss Mary Alice Evans, of Baltimore, was elected president for a two-year term of the Washington-Baltimore Chapter of the eastern region of Kappa Gamma Pi, national honor society for Catholic college alumnae, which held its conference at the Mayflower Hotel last week-end. Miss Evans is a graduate of the College of Notre Dame of Maryland.

Other new officers are Miss Mary Guerin, of Washington, vice president, graduate of Trinity College; Miss Agnes Cooney, of Baltimore, secretary-treasurer, graduate of Notre Dame.

The Washington - Baltimore chapter accepted the assignment from the national chapter to investigate ways and means for Kappa Gamma Pi to distribute on a national scale information in pamphlet form on questions of Catholic doctrine to non-Catholic students and professors in non-Catholic colleges and universities.

The chapter also planned to offer its services to the Dominican Order as sponsors of the Catholic Thought Association in Washington and Baltimore during the coming year.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. FRANCIS ROGERS, founder of the Soldiers and Sailors Club of New York, will address the Women's Overseas Service League at its national convention tomorrow. Mrs. Rogers, who served with the Y. M. C. A. during the war, has recently been appointed by Gen. Robert Lee Bullard head of the women's division of the National Security League, and she is here to ask the women who did their bit overseas before to give their cooperation in the defense program today.

A FRIEND—"Mother Steed" (Mrs. Nathaniel Steed), of Arlington, is one of the interesting figures attending the convention of the Women's Overseas Service League. She is known from coast to coast by former service men and women by the affectionate term "Mother," which she earned in France during the World War, more than 20 years ago.

"Mother Steed" was in the canteen at Dijon but she never stopped when her duties there were over—and she hasn't stopped since. As long as there is a veteran in need, "Mother Steed" is on the job. She did so many kind, helpful things in addition to her canteen work at Dijon that special medals were presented to her by the Knights of Columbus and member of the Jewish Welfare service there, and a silver loving cup was given her by the personnel of Base Hospital 216. Many Soldiers passed through Dijon and hosts of them remember her.

MUSIC NOTES—Mme. Care Gina, former star of the Opera Comique in Paris, and a member of the Women's Overseas Service League, will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" at its banquet tomorrow night at the Mayflower Hotel. Her singing will recall to many members the happier occasion ten years ago when she sang the National Anthem in Paris at the opening of the convention of the league held there in 1930.

Last night at the dinner at the Army-Navy Country Club the soloist was Georgia Fitzgerald, of San Antonio, Tex. Georgia, a young radio artist, became interested in the league when it held its convention in her home city last year, and offered to come to the Capital to sing at this session. She was accompanied by Mrs. Stella Buchanan Case, president of the Phoenix, Ariz., unit.

GEORGIA FITZGERALD

PEN WOMEN ENTERTAIN—Mrs. Edna Knight Gasch, new national president of the National League of American Pen Women and retiring second vice president of the American Federation of Soroptimist Clubs, went to Salt Lake City for the Soroptimist convention as a Soroptimist, but was feted practically all the way there and back as a Pen Woman.

She was entertained by the Chicago and Northern Illinois branches at a supper party at the La Salle Hotel in Chicago on her way West. In Salt Lake she remained a day after the close of the Soroptimist convention and was entertained there at a luncheon at the golf and country club.

In Denver the branch in that city gave a luncheon in her honor. In Kansas City the branch there and the one in Liberty, Mo., a suburb, combined in arranging a tea in her honor at the home of the Kansas City Branch president, Mrs. George W. Fuller, followed by a dinner that night at the Green Parrot Tea House. She also stopped in St. Louis between trains and a brunch was arranged in her honor there.

She arrived home just in time for the annual Founders' Day tea, held Sunday at the home of Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, president of the District Branch, where she received with the hosts.

NEW OFFICERS—Mrs. Robinson Lappin has been elected and installed president of the Women's Auxiliary, No. 31, Hotel Greeters of America.

Other new officers include Mrs. Hazel Wood, first vice president; Miss Lottie Taylor, second vice president; Mrs. Harvey Black, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Anne Neal, sergeant at arms; Mrs. Robert D. Mills, Mrs. Mary Adams, Mrs. Agnes Carpenter, Mrs. John J. Donley, Mrs. Watson B. Jones, jr., Mrs. Edna Finney and Mrs. Alma Williamson, board of governors.

Mrs. Robert D. Mills, past president of the local auxiliary, was delegate to the international convention recently held in Denver, where Miss Bertha Hodge and Mrs. Al Smith, both of Denver, were elected international president and international secretary-treasurer, respectively. Houston, Tex., has been chosen as the 1941 convention city.

HOME AGAIN—Catherine Jones, of the Y. W. C. A. staff, who is now Mrs. Archie Sabin, recently returned from her wedding trip to Florida and is again at her desk in the administration building, Seventeenth and K streets.

Mrs. Warren Plans 5-Week Trip To Western 8 and 40 Salons

Leaving Tomorrow, She Will Wind Up Tour In Chicago August 31; Michigan, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and California on Route

Mrs. Ellen Louise Warren, chapeau national of the Eight and Forty, leaves tomorrow for a five-week Western trip to visit salons (chapters) in various States. She will make official stops in Michigan, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, San Francisco, the Yosemite Valley, Fresno, and Los Angeles, as well as various cities in Oregon, Washington, and South Dakota, and wind up her tour in Chicago on August 31.

In Detroit, Mrs. Warren expects to confer with the national secretary, Pauline Rairdon, and she also will stop over night en route for a conference with Mrs. Mary Haws in Johnstown, Pa., on plans for La Marche Nationale, to be held in Boston, September 23-25.

She has just completed a series of official visits in the States of New York, Maryland and Pennsylvania. With the public relations chairman, Mrs. John McCabe, and Mr. McCabe, who is Garde de la Porte National of the Forty and Eight, she attended the banquet given in Philadelphia in celebration of the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the organization. She and Ed Mulhoony, of Delaware, Chef de Chemin de Fer of the Forty and Eight, were ranking honor guests at the affair.

The major achievement of Mrs. Warren's administration is the establishment of an Eight and Forty Child Health Center in Tucson, Ariz., for tubercular children of veterans. The enormous transient influx of tuberculosis patients into the high, dry air and sunshine presents a difficult problem, and in this vicinity there are 25 States, other than Arizona, represented, also the District of Columbia and Mexico.

Mrs. John R. Murdock, the wife of Arizona's Representative-at-large, has contributed to the Eight and Forty fund for the establishment of this project. Among other contributors of note is Justice Justin Miller of the United States Court of Appeals, who is particularly interested in work of this kind for children. He also recalls the kindness of the women of Tucson who met the troop train on which he was in July, 1918, and provided the boys with watermelons and other delicacies.

Representative Clarence F. Lea, Carl Hinshaw, B. W. Gearhart, Harry R. Sheppard and Gen. Albert L. Cox are other contributors, with Representative Jerry Voorhis sponsor of the bill in the House designed to assist States, counties, health or hospital districts in providing better health service by the establishment of facilities for control of tuberculosis.

A.A.U.W. to Map Aid to British War Children

Special Meeting Called For Tomorrow Afternoon To Discuss Cabled Appeal

A special meeting of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women will be held at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, to consider cooperation in response to the cabled appeal from the British Federation of University Women to the American federation, asking members in this country to care for the children of British members for the duration of the war.

Mrs. William C. Van Vleck, president of the branch, made the announcement yesterday at the regular Monday tea. She has appointed a committee to work on the project here.

Members of the association were addressed at the gathering yesterday by William Sanders, chief of the juridical division of the Pan American Union. Mr. Sanders, who will attend the coming Pan Amreican conference in Havana, declared that "we are on the threshold of a future international decision—either to maintain a balance of power or to establish a permanent basis of international cooperation."

Fifth Column Curbs Proposed

The three chapters in the Havana agenda, he said, deal with neutrality, means for maintaining peace in the Western Hemisphere and economic cooperation. The second item, he said, would probably direct attention to the curbing of subversive activities within the countries more than to defense from possible outside attack.

He traced the evolution of international cooperation from the time of great empires and universal domination to the era of balance of power and looked to the future for fulfillment of the hope for a plan of collective security.

He pointed out that, in times of peace, we say on this continent that we have nothing to do with European affairs, but that we find it necessary to "arm to the teeth" when anything arises to interfere with the balance of power."

Cooperation Seen As World Example

He read the declarations of the Lima conference and asserted that these did not represent abstract theories of cooperation, but were the expression of the sentiment of the people of the 21 American republics and represented the fruit of their experience in adjusting their difficulties without resort to force.

The experience of this hemisphere in this respect will be of great value in the establishment of some system of world cooperation, he predicted. One of the instruments of cooperation, he pointed out, was the Pan American Union, which maintains its headquarters here.

Mrs. David Wing, chairman of the Latin American Fellowship Committee of the Washington Branch of the A. A. U. W., introduced Mr. Sanders. Mrs. Van Vleck presided at the meeting and announced in the year ending May 31, the branch had raised $875 toward its fellowship endowment fund.

Dr. Scott Ends Long Service With Carnegie

Endowment Authority On International Law To Continue Writing

Retirement does not mean cessation of work for Dr. James Brown Scott, 74, who yesterday officially concluded 30 years as secretary of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace here.

SCOTT

No formal ceremonies marked the parting of the widely known authority on international law and his staff at the organization's headquarters, 700 Jackson place northwest. A silver bowl was presented to him as a reminder of their long association.

Dr. Scott will continue to have an office at the headquarters where he will do "whatever work he wants to do," officers said. The author of many books on international law, he plans to continue writing.

Dr. Scott was born in Kincardine, Ontario, and was graduated from Harvard in 1890. After studying international law at Harvard and abroad, he taught for several years. In 1910 he was appointed solicitor of the State Department, and in the same year assumed his office with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

In 1907 Dr. Scott was a technical delegate to the second Hague Peace Conference, and also served in the same capacity at the Paris Peace Conference in 1919, and the Washington Arms Conference in 1921-22. He was named chairman of the United States-Pan American commission of jurists drafting codes of private and public international law in 1927. Dr. Scott was a veteran of both the Spanish-American and World War when he served in the judge advocate's department of the Army.

D. C. Exceeds Red Cross Goal By $30,840

Only Big City in U. S. To Surpass Its Quota; Supplies for Poland

Washington yesterday remained the only city of more than 500,000 population in the country to have exceeded its quota in the American Red Cross war relief fund campaign.

The $741.81 turned in yesterday brought the local total to $30,840.86 over the $300,000 goal. Total of the national fund was $16,952,101—more than $3,000,000 short of the $20,000,000 national goal.

The national organization announced that the Philippine Islands Red Cross Chapter was prepared to receive more than 1,100 American citizens and refugees of other nationalities who have left Hong Kong on the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan.

Ray Schaeffer, American Red Cross representative, is distributing 14 carloads of clothing, shoes, blankets, medical supplies and drugs to Polish relief agencies, according to a cablegram received here yesterday.

Bruce Baird, chairman of the District chapter campaign, last night urged everyone having money destined for the Red Cross to send it as soon as possible. It is hoped the campaign will be concluded this week.

A Red Cross golf tourney will be held at the Indian Spring Country Club Thursday, with top golfers from all sections of the country taking part.

Gifts received yesterday included one from the War Department, $159.43; Wilson Teachers College, $151; District Sewerage Department, $6.25; District Schools, for the National Children's Fund, $126.45; Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy employes, $2, and Potomac Electric Power Co. employes, $33.95.

Annenberg Given Three Years For Evading Income Taxes

Execution of Sentence Stayed 20 Days; Philadelphia Publisher Seemed Dazed By Judgment on One of Six Counts

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 1.—M. L. Annenberg, who made millions in publishing, racing news and real estate enterprises, was sentenced today to three years in prison for evading income taxes, but he remained free pending a court ruling on his plea for suspension of the penalty.

When Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson pronounced judgment Annenberg slumped back in his chair. He seemed dazed.

Defense Counsel Weymouth Kirkland quickly began a move to keep his client from the penitentiary. He filed a petition for probation and suspension of the sentence. The jurist agreed to stay execution of the penalty for 20 days and announced that he would rule on the request for clemency before that time had expired.

Annenberg's original $100,000 bond was allowed to stand and he walked out of the courthouse without making a statement.

The petition for probation set forth that Annenberg was 63 and "not in good health;" that he had never been convicted of a crime; that failure to pay taxes listed in the indictment was due primarily to "inadequate and inexperienced" bookkeepers; that he had agreed to pay the Government $8,000,000 and interest in settlement of civil tax claims; and that his family was "absolutely dependent" upon the continued operation of his businesses.

Annenberg, publisher of the Philadelphia Inquirer, magazines and sports periodicals and former ruler of a Nation-wide turf information empire, pleaded guilty April 23 to evading $1,217,296 in taxes on his 1936 earnings. That constituted one count of a six-count indictment alleging failure to pay $5,548,384 in levies on his 1932-36 income. It was the largest criminal tax case against an individual in United States history.

His admission of gilt on the one count could have entailed a maximum punishment of five years imprisonment and a $10,000 fine, or both. United States District Attorney William J. Campbell termed the three-year penalty "eminently fair." He said remaining cases against Annenberg—involving other tax matters, lottery charges and conspiracy to influence a grand jury witness—would be dismissed.

Scott Circle Property Owners Denounce Plans for Underpass

Residents Deny Need for Tunnel Along Line of Sixteenth Street

Charging "skullduggery" and the loss of "substantial rights," 50 indignant Scott circle property owners last night denounced plans to cut an underpass beneath the circle in the line of Sixteenth street.

They demanded an investigation of Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst and Traffic Director William A Van Duzer, and, denying the need for any Scott circle underpass, they urged that if one must be constructed, it should be tunneled in the line of Massachusetts avenue.

The meeting was attended largely by residents of Sixteenth street. But a few Massachusetts avenue property owners were present also.

They protested when Dr. William P. Ingersoll, of 1220 Sixteenth street, declared:

"Let them build it on Masschusetts avenue if they must, but we don't want it on Sixteenth street."

"Neither do we want it on Massachusetts avenue," shouted Miss Elsie Green, of 1625 Massachusetts avenue.

She was supported by Miss Dorothy Rynex, of 1515 Massachusetts avenue. Another resident of that street sought unsuccessfully to revive the original motion introduced by Dr. Ingersoll, which denounced plans for any and all underpasses at the circle.

Plans to Organize

After the meeting, which was held at the headquarters of the Society of Sons of the American Revolution, 1227 Sixteenth street northwest, Miss Green told The Post that she planned to organize a movement of Massachusetts avenue property owners to counteract the Sixteenth street threat.

"Secretary Ickes is on our side," she said. "We can't lose. We don't want an underpass any more than they do. But if one's got to be constructed, let it be on Sixteenth street."

Albert Brick, a Washington attorney, who was invited to provide background for the discussion, told the meeting that "some skulduggery has been used to bring about the change in plans. Originally the underpass was to have been constructed in the line of Massachusetts avenue."

"You ought to have your day in court," he said, "before anything is put over on you. No property owners were informed of the change in plans. This is not the first time people in this city have awakened in the morning to find themselves deprived of substantial rights."

At Brick's suggestion the resolution was amended to ask for an open hearing before the Commissioners at which experts would be invited in to testify.

Charges Figure Are Old

Howard Phillips, president of the Jefferson Apartments Corporation, charged that the traffic figures used to justify the change in plans were four years old. Even in 1936, he said, traffic was only 3 per cent heavier on Sixteenth than on Massachusetts avenue.

Phillips advocated the widening of the road around the circle from 61 to 100 feet. This, he said, would save the statue and trees and would cost but $25,000. The underpass would cost about $400,000.

Meanwhile Representative Jennings Randolph, House committee chairman, said he felt the underpass should be along the line of Massachusetts avenue rather than Sixteenth street.

Chairman William H. King, of the Senate committee, said he was opposed to underpasses altogether. He declared:

"I am unalterably opposed to mutilating the beautiful circles of Washington. I don't want a New York, or Philadelphia or Baltimore here. This is Washington. I want the historic L'Enfant plan kept as perfectly as possible."

Auto Climbs Wheaton Porch; Driver Arrested

The family of Joseph M. Melia, Wheaton, Md., was just about to sit down to dinner when a station wagon crashed into the front of their home yesterday, shaking up the house and causing damage estimated at $600.

The unexpected visitor, who gave his name as Dallas Edwards, was not invited in for supper. Instead he was arrested by Silver Spring police, charged with driving while intoxicated, and held on $1,000 bond pending trial August 5.

Melia said his four children, ranging from 3 to 8 years, had been on the front porch only a few minutes before the auto climbed onto it.

Cabbie Kidnaped By Bandits Tells Of Terror Ride

William E. Bell, 25-year-old cab driver of 2128 First street northwest, was back at home yesterday after a hair-raising experience Saturday night in which he learned "you can be scared to death just so long and then you get over it."

BELL

Bell's ordeal began at Seventeenth street and New York avenue when two coatless men hailed his cab. It ended four hours later—in Richmond. Meanwhile, Bell, his legs and arms taped, sat terrified in the back seat with one of the men who held a gun all the way. The other man drove.

When they arrived in Richmond, the cab driver saw an opportunity to escape as they passed a policeman. He managed to thrust a door of the car open and dived from the moving taxi, he said. The taxi sped on, but plunged into a canal a few blocks away. Police believe the two men escaped.

Robber Gags Boy Minding Dad's Store, Flees With Radio

BANDIT'S VICTIM—Twelve-year-old George Georgiou was gagged with the cloth he holds, threatened with the hammer, and was struck by robber who made off with $4 radio

"I sure was worried he might take a bigger radio," said 12-year-old George Georgiou, of 125 Fourth street northeast, pinchhitting for his father in the latter's electrical store, after he had been gagged and struck on the head yesterday by a colored man who ran off with a $4 radio.

Young Georgiou, who said he frequently acts as clerk in the store at 802 H street northwest, while his father is busy on assignments to install electrical fixtures, was in the store when the colored man asked to see some radios.

Georgiou told police he was suspicious at first because the same man had come to the store last Saturday on the pretense of "just looking around." While the boy's three chums were in the front room the colored man, according to police, placed a piece of cloth over Georgiou's mouth, then struck the boy on the head with his fist when he resisted.

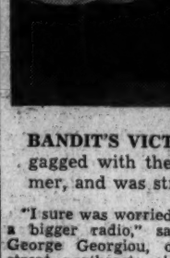
"Everything looked black for a minute," explained the frightened boy, who decided not to shout for help when the colored man threatened him with a hammer. A moment later the intruder seized a small radio and dashed out of the store.

Young Georgiou said he and his three friends saw the man run through a side street. The young clerk then locked up and told his story to a policeman he and his chums encountered a few blocks away.

"Gee, I was scared," the lad remarked later, "but I'm glad he only took a little radio. I was afraid he was going to take a lot more."

R. L. Huff Enters Mount Alto Hospital

Raymond L. Huff, who recently gave up his post as superintendent of District penal institutions to become warden of the Federal Prison at McNeil Island, Wash., has entered Mount Alto Hospital for a general examination, it was learned yesterday.



HUFF

The prison expert was stricken Saturday in Lexington, Ky., where he spoke before a meeting of the National Probation Officers. He was brought to Mount Alto Sunday. At the hospital it was said his condition was "comfortable."

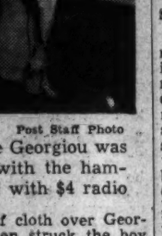
Swift Confirmation Forecast for Elgen

Nomination by President Roosevelt of Riley E. Elgen to another three-year term as chairman of the District Public Utilities Commission will be confirmed "without opposition," Chairman William H. King of the Senate District Committee forecast last night.



ELGEN

Elgen has been chairman of the commission since May, 1934. He was first appointed to serve as a member in 1932. Prior to his connection with the District government Elgen was attached to the valuation section of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

He was born in Mount Airy, Md., in 1882, is married, and has three children.

Divorce Suit Defendant Asks Decree

Zane W. Kelly, District fireman, answered his wife's divorce suit yesterday with a charge that she became "a religious fanatic" 12 years after their marriage. Kelly asked the District Court for a divorce on his own account.

The Kellys were married in 1919, soon after the husband was discharged from the Army. Mrs. Kelly, of 1626 G street southeast, recently asked for a divorce, asserting that her husband left her April 19, 1936.

Through Attorney Karl Kindleberger, Kelly yesterday disclaimed blame for the separation. He told the court that since 1931 his wife had been "a member of the Pentecostal Faith Church, known as and commonly called Holy Rollers."

Kelly said she quit using rouge, nail polish and lipstick, would not go to dances or theaters, would not accompany him to parties where there was smoking or drinking, would allow no newspapers or radio playing in the home on Sunday and that she "prayed aloud almost continually when he was home."

Because of this, said Kelly's answer, sometimes he did not go home, but would sleep in his automobile Finally, the answer said, he left.

Farmers to Protest 21st St. Parking Ban

A proposed parking ban on Twenty-first street northwest adjacent to the K street market will be protested at 11 a. m. today when a group of farmers meet with Commissioner John Russell Young.

The farm delegation contends the prohibition will injure their business at the market. Although the Commissioners adopted the no-parking order several weeks ago, its enactment has been postponed pending today's protest conference.

One on WPA Spurns Allegiance Oath

Out of the District's 11,000 WPA employes, only one has refused to sign an affidavit pledging allegiance to the United States, it was learned yesterday at the District Building.

The refusal came from a member of Jehovah's Witnesses, a religious sect, and was based on religious convictions, officials reported. They withheld the worker's name.

Distribution of affidavits for signing by all local WPA workers began last week.

Business Booms As Dog Tag Sale Begins

Business boomed in the District tax collector's office yesterday as 1,386 dog owners took advantage of the first day's sale of licenses.

The rush for tags was one of the greatest in recent years, said Tax Collector Chatham Towers. He warned that all dogs without tags after July 31 would be fair prey for Poundmaster Frank Marks. It was estimated that there are 26,000 dogs in Washington.

New Gallinger Ward To Be Inspected Today

Final inspection of the $600,000 ward building at Gallinger Hospital will be made at 9:30 a. m. today, it was announced yesterday at the District Building.

Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., will head the inspection group. The Gallinger structure, designed to reduce overcrowding at the institution, was started March 24, 1939.

Firemen Get 2 for 1 On Southwest Run

No. 4 Engine Company got two for one yesterday when they responded to an alarm at 712 G street southwest. They had no sooner put out the blaze in the first and second stories of a house at that address, when another fire broke out in a shed at 806. The firemen didn't wait for an alarm.

300 Go Unpaid In Bureau Shift

Three hundred Washington employes of the Immigration and Naturalization Service went unpaid on regular Government payday yesterday. It was expected, however, they would be paid today.

Under the fifth executive reorganization order, the bureau was shifted June 14 from Labor to Justice Department. Thus, yesterday was to have been the employes' first Justice Department payday. An official explained that bookkeeping involved in the transfers caused a delay in distribution of the checks.

Child Crime Blame Put On Parents

Sen. McCarran Lays Delinquency Rate Here to Working Heads of Families

Working fathers and mothers were blamed by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday for the Capital's high rate of juvenile delinquency.

Senator McCarran, chairman of a subcommittee which has just completed an investigation of the operation of the Juvenile Court under Judge Fay Bentley, declared:

"It isn't at all surprising to find an unusual number of so-called cases in Washington in which juvenile problems are concerned. This is due in a large part to the fact that in the District fathers and mothers frequently are both employed and therefore away from home a great part of the time.

"This leads to lack of guidance for the children. It leads also to a high percentage of juvenile delinquency problems.

Sees Need for Study

"The same observation might be made of domestic relations. Speaking impersonally as regards confirmation of any appointee, but addressing myself solely to the juvenile problem, I do not hesitate to say that the whole social welfare situation in this respect is something that demands immediate attention by those in authority. The District Commissioners are in authority and likewise the committees of the two Houses of Congress.

"This is not a question that can be shunted off onto the shoulders of social welfare workers—and such has been the course pursued—as will only lead to more and more social bewilderment.

The Senator, who has advocated separating the juvenile and domestic relations functions of Judge Bentley's court into two branches, each handling one phase, said he was in favor of naming a man to one of the posts.

Exempt D. C. Auto Tags

In another District legislative development yesterday, Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, chairman of the District Committee, promised an amendment to a House-passed bill restricting interstate shipment of prison-made goods, to clarify the District's right to continue manufacture of auto license plates and bricks at Lorton Reformatory.

The bill, sponsored by Representative Hobbs, would relieve the ban on commodities made in penal institutions for use by States and the Federal Government, but failed to apply the exemption specifically to the District.

Bills made law by President Roosevelt's signature yesterday included measures to raise from $3 to $10 per diem pay of members of the District Board of Steam and Other Operating Engineers, while sitting as a board; to regulate the practice of podiatry in the District, to furnish heat from the central heating plant to the National Academy of Sciences, to pay Federal and District employes while absent from their offices for jury duty, and to provide for the administration of Gravelly Point Airport.

Ex-Police Chief Of Mount Rainier Urges Town Probe

Eugene Plumer, Mount Rainier (Md.) police chief who resigned Saturday after a dispute with Mayor Norman Pruitt, last night promised disclosures "that will dump the town upside down."

In a free-for-all argument before the town council and almost 100 citizens, the former police chief urged an inquiry into town affairs.

Plumer launched his attack on the mayor when the latter said he had found Plumer drinking in the police station.

"I told him to get out of the office," Pruitt declared. "He refused, and then he started to abuse me and call me names. I took his cap and badge off with my own hands."

County Hurries Police Charges

Charges of negligence of duty in the face of an emergency will be ready today for presentation to B. Peyton Whalen, police civil service commisisoner for Montgomery County, Md., against three policemen involved in the mob attack upon a Jehovah's Witnesses meeting at Rockville, Md., June 19.

The three policemen against whom charges have been prepared include Sergt. Guy L. Jones, who was in the police station during most of the riot; Policeman Leslie B. Thompson and Policeman Charles Peters.

Chief of Police Charles M. Orme was dismissed Saturday by the Montgomery County Commissioners after hearing evidence of his part in the affair. Department of Justice agents are investigating the riot also.

Big Parade Feature Of First Night; Prizes Are Awarded

A laughing, shouting crowd of 10,000 launched the twentieth annual carnival of St. Gabriel's Church on the parish grounds at Grant Circle last night. The carnival will be held each night this week through Saturday.

Feature of last night's opening was a parade of patriotic and fraternal organizations through adjoining streets of the Petworth area led by Col. John W. Oehmann and National Guard units.

Seven bands were in the column which included units of the American Legion, women's auxiliaries, Knights of Columbus, costumed children and private autos and business trucks.

In the children's division, the prize for the best decorated bicycle went to Suzanne Crowder, 4325 Third street northwest. Mary and Jack O'Day, of 237 Rock Creek Church road northwest, received a prize for the best costumes. They were dressed in green satin as an Irish lad and lassie.

Prize for the most comical costumes went to Donald Jones, 210 Taylor street northwest; Allen Harder, 4012 Third street northwest, and Barbara Cumberland, 4018 Third street northwest, who were decked out in flashy clothing and wheeling a baby carriage. A silver cup went to the Holmes Bakery for the best decorated truck.

Antipollution Board Assured For Potomac

House passage of a resolution setting up the Potomac Valley Conservancy District yesterday virtually assured creation of an interstate antipollution commission by next fall. The resolution, previously adopted by the Senate, has been sent to the White House for the President's signature.

Under the terms of the measure, a compact signed by representatives of the District, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and West Virginia for abatement of pollution in the Potomac and its tributaries will become effective just as soon as the conservation council can be organized.

Creates Commission

The compact, already approved by the District Commissioners and the Legislatures of Maryland and Pennsylvania, sets up an interstate commission consisting of three members from each State and the District, and three appointed by the President representing Federal interests.

J. B. Gordon, District sanitary engineer, a member of the temporary interstate committee, explained last night that although Pennsylvania and West Virginia have not yet ratified the compact, the District and its two neighboring States cover 90 per cent of the Potomac watershed, and that under the agreement the compact becomes effective when approved by three of the States and Congress.

He added that Pennsylvania and West Virginia could not act on the compact until their Legislatures meet.

To Be Study Board

The commission will be a research council with no authority, but, working with the health and sanitary departments of the States, will recommend legislation and act toward preventing further pollution of the Potomac and the eventual abatement of present conditions. It will have a $30,000 budget, apportioned among the States.

District members of the temporary committee are Gordon, Oliver Gasch, assistant corporation counsel, and Claud F. Browning, public health department engineer consultant.

District officials launched a drive for an antipollution council four years ago. Shortly afterward a special advisory board of the National Resources Committee urged Congress to appropriate $15,000,000 and make the Potomac drainage basin an experimental unit for antipollution work. Congress never did appropriate the money.

Later, however, the Board of Trade, getting together officials of the District and four States, organized the Potomac Valley Pollution Conference, which, working through the Council of State Governments, made the compact.

Traffic Tags 'Fixed' for 74 During Week

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (Democrat), of Maryland, was among 74 persons whose traffic tickets were fixed last week, according to the list made public yesterday through the office of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

The names of two other Congressmen appeared on the list as they used their good offices to arrange warnings. One of them was Representative Dan R. McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who arranged a pardon for his 18-year-old daughter, Gloria, "tagged" for obstructing an entrance.

Doing a good turn for a constituent was Representative Fred A. Hartley, jr. (Republican), of New Jersey, who arranged a warning for James J. Donovan, of Bayonne, N. J., charged with parking overtime.

Representative Sasscer had his own violation of parking in a restricted zone taken care of with a warning when he stated he was on official Government business.

Warnings totaled 59 for the week, while 15 persons had their tickets cancelled outright. Three persons escaped fines on the plea of diplomatic immunity; 12 said their cars were either pushed or disabled, six pleaded they were visitors to the city and unfamiliar with local regulations, while two doctors said they were answering emergency calls.

Those who pleaded diplomatic immunity were: Jean Charpentier, French Embassy; Erich Mueller, German Embassy, and Jose Sera, Cuban Embassy.

City Leaders Form District Defense Unit

Elect Colliflower President; Begin By Aiding National Guard Recruit Drive

Outstanding Washington business and professional men formed a "District Defense Committee" yesterday to "support our Government and our people in national defense."

Meeting at the District recruiting office of the National Guard in the Woodward Building, they elected James E. Colliflower, president of the Washington Board of Trade, as chairman and laid plans to assist the local National Guard's enlistment drive.

An immediate objective, it was decided, will be to obtain the agreement of employers to give employes three weeks' leave this August to attend National Guard maneuvers in New York State.

Will Provide Speakers

The committee also will provide speakers and arrange radio programs to promote the National Guard's drive for 400 recruits in the District.

The group named Edgar K. Legg, jr., insurance man, and Winslow B. Van Devanter, investment counsel, as vice chairmen, and Col. Harrison Brand, jr., executive secretary of the Washington Board of Trade, as secretary.

Recruit Drive Begins

The District National Guard's drive for recruits got under way last night, when the Guard's Battery C, 260th Coast Artillery, staged an antiaircraft demonstration on the parking lot at Fourteenth street and Park road northwest, to stimulate the enlistment drive.

The Twenty-ninth Division, comprising National Guard units of the District, Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania, will begin leaving by road and rail for upper New York State August 3 for maneuvers of the First Army, most gigantic war games in American peacetime history.

Under this year's appropriation, the Guard will spend three weeks in training, rather than the customary two, returning home August 24.

Dempsey Shows Old-Time Punch, Stops Cowboy

The Washington Post Sports

16 WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 2, 1940 X*

Nats Bow to Yankees, 8-4, Return to Cellar

Luttrell Lasts Only Two Rounds

Wrestler Never Has Chance; 15,000 See Mauler Lift Rival Clear Out of Ring

Atlanta, Ga., July 1.—Jack Dempsey touched off the long dormant dynamite of his fists tonight and pounded Wrestler Cowboy Luttrell clear out of the ring for a second-round knockout. It was the Manassa Mauler's first ring appearance in eight years.

As far as 15,000 Southerners were concerned, Dempsey was the same panther-muscled fighter with the million-dollar punch who clouted his way to glory in the 20s.

The lumbering Luttrell waded into a barrage of rights and lefts at the first bell and only the bell and a good grip on the ropes saved him from a kayo in the opening round.

Then in the second round, Dempsey knocked the bulky grappler down for a count of eight immediately after the bell. Luttrell got up mainly by instinct. Dempsey's triphammer instantly began whaling the cowboy's face again.

Luttrell backed into the ropes and took a count of two and then came out for the last time. Jack shot a right between Luttrell's eyes and the cowboy sailed over the ropes into the press section. The time was 1 minute and 58 seconds of the second round.

Carried to Showers

Long after he was counted out and the crowd set up an ovation for Dempsey, Luttrell lay in the aisles and when Milo Steinborn, his wrestler-aide, carted him away to the showers he still didn't know the fight was over.

Luttrell's face was mincement after Dempsey got through with him. The mauler was unmarked except for a few red streaks around his thickening midriff.

Dempsey said he felt great and hadn't even worked up a sweat, but his breath came in heaves.

Atlanta's Pride

Dempsey had never fought in the South during his prime, and he was Atlanta's pride tonight. He might have been a decade late but the old punch was still there and when Luttrell landed outside the ring you would have thought the mauler had just knocked out Firpo by the tumult that greeted the wallop.

Dempsey's belated return to the ring resulted from a "feud" that developed while he was refereeing Luttrell's wrestling bouts. Jack still was scheduled to fight another wrestler in Detroit July 15 but his followers doubted that he would try a serious comeback at his ripe old boxing age of 45.

Since he lost the second Gene Tunney fight in 1927, Dempsey had not appeared in the ring, except for an exhibition with King Levinsky in 1932.

Champs Beat Washington Sixth Time

Ruffing Has Easy Job; Chase Allows Two Homers; Fans Register Boredom

By Shirley Povich.

They were shoved into the league cellar by the unfeeling New York Yankees, who were beating the Nats for the sixth consecutive time this season. The score yesterday was 8 to 4, which is just a bit flattering to the Nats, inasmuch as they were stooging for the Yanks after the third inning.

Red Ruffing was the winning pitcher. He breezed through the first seven innings and wheezed through the last two, when the Nats came up with all of their runs. It wasn't until the fourth that the 3,000 customers were able to salute the first Washington hit. Going into the eighth, big Mr. Ruffing was pitching three-hit shutout ball.

Chase No Problem

Ken Chase didn't exactly baffle the Yankees. He served a home run to Joe DiMaggio with Charley Keller on base in the third inning, and in the eighth he stirred up another home run, this time for George Selkirk. There were a couple of Yankee doubles and a triple mixed up n the proceedings, and it seems also that he hit three batters, wild-pitched one run home and chucked a second wild pitch past Jake Early.

The Nats did not play very well. In fact, the customers were highly displeased. The Bronx cheer broke out at intervals, particularly when Jake Early and Zeke Bonura contrived to drop tame pop fouls. Summed up, the Nats made five errors. The only grievous misplay, however, was Charley Gelbert's sixth-inning fumble which precipitated two Yankee runs at that point.

Ten hits were made by each club,

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

This evening at Jersey City two guys will crawl through the ropes of a prize ring in search of something they should be avoiding—another bout with Joe Louis. Max Baer and Tony Galento will let fly at each other in the battle of forlorn hopes. The man who emerges the winner will meet Louis, but not for long. Louis doesn't dally with that kind.

POVICH

They're as choice a pair of fistic freaks as ever scuffed their shoes in the resin. They're back challenging one of the greatest champions in heavyweight history at an age when contenders ordinarily are in the fistic ash-can. They've both been knocked out by Louis, but they're still apparently the best of a sad crop of challenging heavyweights.

Galento has defied every maxim of training in his late bid for fistic fame. He was a dime-dozen heavyweight in his youthful years when a fighter is supposed to box at his peak. But within the past year, as a hog-fat, beer-guzzling tavern keeper he has bounced into the contending class. All of a sudden he discovered that his left hook could knock guys down and keep most of 'em down. He even had Louis on the floor and was only a couple of punches away from winning Louis' title before he was punched into a glassy-eyed pulp.

Joe Jacobs was the man who moved Galento into a title fight. Not until the late Yussel, who found himself sans a meal ticket after Louis knocked out his man Schmeling in a round, took an interest in Galento was the Jerseyman anything more than a well-punched piece of fistic bric-a-brac. Jacobs ballyhoed Galento with such cleverness and built him up with so many set-up fights that apparently Tony began to believe many of the things Jacobs was telling newspapermen or anybody else who would listen. And for those few brief seconds when he had Louis on the floor, Galento was, indeed, most of the things Jacobs had been saying.

But in Galento's corner there will be no Joe Jacobs tonight. The little manager has gone to his celestial reward, if any, and Two-Ton Tony is strictly on his own. How he'll act under those circumstances is something quite indefinite. He was never any account without Jacobs in his corner needling him with the confidence that he was in smart hands and thus could lick anybody. For all his bluster, Galento was naive enough to believe things like that if Jacobs was the man who said 'em.

The really sad case in the ring tonight will not be Galento but Max Baer. He is the fellow who was physically equipped to win the title and hold it for a long time. In contrast to Galento, there was not a single flaw in Baer's physical make-up. He came striding out of the West ten years ago as the likeliest-looking heavyweight of his generation. He evoked oh's and ah's with his wondrous physique—sturdy, long-muscled legs, powerful shoulders that tapered into an amazing wasp-waist on a 200-pounder. He was sure-fire to go far.

His job in his father's butcher shop hacking away at sides of beef developed him a terrific over-hand right and he was beginning to show that he could fight a little bit. He went 20 gruelling rounds with Paulino Uzcudun at Reno. He had stamina. In San Francisco he hit Frankie Campbell on the chin and killed him. When they graduated him to the top flight he toyed with the sharp-shooting Max Schmeling and knocked him stiff with a round-house right. He floored Primo Carnera twelve times and won the championship.

And then he frittered it away. He was allergic to gymnasiums and road-work. His idea of happiness was a night club where he could display his slave bracelets and his other fopperies. When he fought Jimmy Braddock for his title he didn't bother much to defend it and let a million-dollar diadem slip out of his gloves to the ex-dock walloper who was a washed-up light heavy when Baer was riding the crest.

Just as a smart manager changed Galento into a more useful sort of fighter a woman changed Max Baer. After he met and married Mary Sullivan, manager of a Washington cafeteria, he settled down about as much as he could settle down. That means he took himself and his fighting seriously, at odd times. He quit to Joe Louis but he made a game stand-up fight of it against Lou Nova and was so proud of that one that, as he stood against the ring ropes at the finish, his face a misshapen mass, he turned to the boxing writers at the ringside and said proudly.

He should have suffered that change of heart about his fighting many years ago when he had the weapons to make good his boasts. Now, as they say of Herpicide, it's too late. If he gets by Galento—and he ought to do that tonight—he'll only be encountering the fellow he should be taking great pains to avoid. Thirty-one-year-old pugs who have led Max Baer's life aren't the kind that will beat Joe Louis, or even come close.

Dodgers Beat Phillies, 4-3; Half Game Out

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 1.—The Brooklyn Dodgers pushed their way to a 4-3 triumph over the Phillies today in a sloppy sesison that was decided principally through a three-run first-inning assault on Hugh Mulcahy. Brooklyn moved up half a game behind Cincinnati's National League leaders.

The Dodgers were outhit, 8-7, but in that big first inning Cookie Lavagetto walked, Dixie Walker doubled, Joe Medwick tripled and scored on a wild pitch.

2 Home Runs By Slaughter Win for Cards

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, July 1.—Enos Slaughter and Lon Warneke and Ernie Koy were key men in St. Louis' 3-to-2 defeat of the Cincinnati Reds today.

Slaughter's two home runs, his third and fourth of the season, accounted for all the Cardinals' runs. Warneke allowed only seven hits and was tight in the pinches. Koy made a great catch of Bill Werber's long clout for the last out of the game, which, had it been a hit, would have tied up the score.

Galento, Baer Fight Tonight in Jersey City

Tony Unperturbed by Strange Case Of the Gashed Chin; 'Battle of Bums' Set for 9 P. M. in Roosevelt Stadium

By the Associated Press

Jersey City, N. J., July 1.—The case of the gashed chin, the final daffiest touch to an already hilarious set-up, was more or less cleared up today, and it appeared only the constabulary could prevent Tony Galento and Max Baer from keeping their fistic date in the local ball park tomorrow night at 9 o'clock (E.S.T.)

A beer glass, thrown by Tony's brother, picked out Tony's chin in Galento's "soft drink emporium" in Orange last night, and the results threatened for a time to force a postponement of the "battle of the bums." The glass sliced Tony's chin for about an inch, right where his dimple would be if he had a dimple.

A couple of doctors looked it over today, however, and reported to State Boxing Commissioner Abe J. Greene that if the sliced chin was the only cut Tony received in there tomorrow from the playboy of the Pacific, he needn't worry. So, Greene asked Promoter Mike Jacobs and Herman Taylor, one of Two-Ton Tony's managers, how they felt about it. All hands, including Tony, decided the "minor abrasion" was not serious enough to keep this epic from an eager public.

Tony Played Rummy

An interesting sidelight on the episod e came to light with the thorough investigation. It seems Tony made a slight mistake during an argument with his brother, Russell, by placing the glass on the bar between them. He should have locked it in the safe, or at least put it out of reach. For when the two got excited, Russell picked up the glass and threw it. His pitching arm and aim looked so good that, after being taken to headquarters by police and then released, he spent most of the rest of the night turning down offers from major league clubs.

Galento didn't realize for several minutes he had been cut. When someone pointed out the blood, he put a small square of adhesive tape on it and went about his business of taking over his other manager, Harry Mendel, in a game of rummy.

He felt less concerned about the injury today. He did a stretch of roadwork and turned in a few rounds of calisthenics in the gym to put the finishing touches on his training. Baer also was on the road for a while and then, like the true artist, spent the rest of the day taking in the beauties of the New Jersey countryside at his camp at Pompton Lakes.

Inasmuch as this battle for the championship of the screwballs had a certain appeal to lovers of both the sublime and the ridiculous, officials expect more than 30,000 and a gate flirting with the $150,000-mark.

Sliced chin and all, Galento still was the betting "cherce" tonight. The only change made by his little scrape with Russell was that the betting fraternity cut the price from 5-9 to 5-8 with Tony favored.

Baer's training has given the impression that the one-time champion of the world is something less than he was in his prime, when he was bowling over guys like old Primo Carnera and Max Schmeling. For that reason, despite the fact Tony has been no rip-snorting tiger in his work, most observers think he'll belt Baer out before the 15 rounds are up. This corner believes it will take him about six heats to turn the trick.

The winner in this one won't be happy for long. He is scheduled to meet up with Joe Louis in September, and, as each discovered in being knocked out by the Bomber in the past, there are pleasanter ways to spend an evening.

Gomez Makes First Start Since April Against Nats Today

The Yankees will unveil Lefty Gomez as a starting pitcher today for the first time since April 19 when he pulled a muscle in his side after hurling five innings against the Nats at Yankee Stadium.

Gomez underwent treatment at Johns Hopkins Hospital last month and has figured in two minor league exhibition games as a warm-up for today's starting assignment.

Manager Bucky Harris is entrusting Dutch Leonard with the job of halting the Nats' losing streak of three straight. The Nats knuckleballer has won one game and lost one against the Yankees this season. He beat them four straight games last year.

Charlotte Pitchers Shelled as Colts Win

Boyd Stops Dan Hassett In 10th Round

By Al Hailey

Bald-headed Bill Boyd, with both eyes fast on the way to closing, chopped down the "sturdy oak of Oak Lawn" in the waning moments of a 10-round lightening war last night at Griffith Stadium.

The "sturdy oak," otherwise known as Irish Danny Hassett, of Philadelphia, went down under a murderous attack after 1 minute and 45 seconds of the final round—the technical knockout victim of the former sailor protege of Jack Dempsey.

The end was hinted at in the opening seconds of the first round when Boyd brought the meager crowd of 1,500 to its feet by dropping Hassett for a nine count with a steaming right-hand smash flush on the chin.

Hassett Comes Back

But the fans weer in for a surprise, for the 6-to-5 underdog came back to bring the fight to Boyd for the next six rounds before running into a dynamite-laden barrage from the former sailor that had him on the floor again in the eighth for nine.

Then in the tenth it came. Boyd was all over the cut and bleeding Hassett and slammed him to the canvas with a straight left followed by a crushing right uppercut. Danny took the count on wobbly knees and somehow made it to his feet. The rest was easy. Boyd took careful aim and let loose a replica of that first-round righthand punch,

Browns Beat Indians, 2-1, In Night Game

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 1.—The St. Louis Browns, currently the American League's No. 1 trouble-makers, defeated the Cleveland Indians 2 to 1, tonight under the lights to cut the Tribe's lead over second-place Detroit to a single game.

A homer by Harland Clift in the sixth inning with the bases empty after two were out gave the Browns their first run. The other came in the eighth after Ray Radcliff doubled and came home on a wild pitch, after advancing to third when George McQuinn was thrown out at first.

The Indians got their ninth inning run gratis after Elden Auker, whose victory was his seventh in 13 starts this season, walked Hal Trosky with the bases loaded, scoring Lou Boudreau.

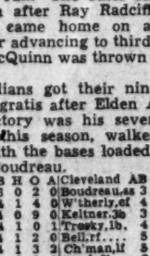
On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Summit, N. J., July 1.—Reports that Tony Galento's wind is bad were thoroughly discredited here yesterday when the man from Orange (who's shaped like one) finished his training for the Max Baer fight in a burst of gusty oratory that indicated he is in perfect shape for Tuesday night's version of the Wedding of the Winds.



CONSIDINE

Galento talked steadily through a workout of more than an hour, gave the press a frying, spotted and berated a bloke in the audience who owes him a $12 bar bill, playfully swung on stray bystanders, dandled two highly impressed kiddies on his knee with fatherly skill, got in a loud argument with Izzy Kaplan, world's greatest photographer, on the topic of mothers-in-law, and carried on a running fire of debatable humor while slugging around two sparring mates, punching the big and little bags and peeling off his heavy trunks, jersey and rubber corset after the workout.

The pertinent statements are that "Baer's a quittin' bum who'll begin lookin' for a hole soon as I clout him one. I'll win in two or three. He talks tough before every fight, then quits. The only worry I got about this fight is whether that tramp's gonna give the people a run for their dough."

But these were the least of Two-Ton's soundings. When he climbed through the ring ropes of his outdoor training site and surveyed the visiting reporters he began assailing them with heavy half-meant humor. "You say I'm a clown, huh?" he bellowed at the silent gents in the front row of the chatauqua bleachers. "Well, I own half of Orange, now, and I'm openin' a new joint what seats a hunneri. How can I be so dumb?"

An admirer yelled up something, interrupting Tony, and Galento silenced him with "hey, one bum at a time. I got the floor." He practiced his knee-to-the-groin punch a while, then moved over to the light bag and soon had it going at blurring speed. But he was still counting the house and soon his shrewd little black eyes lit on a guy in the ninth row. "Hey, y'bum, get that twelve bucks you owe me over to my joint or this is what you'll get," he barked, and he nearly ripped the bag out by the roots with a swinging left hook.

He got the bladder going back and forth again in rhythmic time, aimed another hay-making left at it and missed it a foot, nearly falling off balance from the force of his follow through. Somebody laughed and it hurt Tony's feelings. "Well . . . so I missed. But a big bum like Baer I can't miss." He strode back to the ring proper, slapping heartily at the waves of hairy fat around his middle, like some bawdy cave man getting up red-mouthed from a satisfying mastodon chop.

His first sparring partner was Eddie Cameron, who kept away from Tony's bullish charges. Tony lost interest in the bout mid-way, and his attentiveness lapsed until Harry Mendel, who owns a piece of Tony about the size of Guatemala, if you can think of Tony as the globe—which isn't difficult—gave a long speech about the location of ticket offices. Tony throttled him right in the middle with, "but all the good ones are on sale down my joint." He gave the address, and added that he personally had seen to it that top price was $12 "so's all my pals in Jersey can come."

Tony's next opponent was a flabby spar-mate named Steve Collucci. They floundered around the ring, wheezing basso and alto, looking like two bull walruses locked in a steamy contest for the flap of the Brenda Frazier of the herd. Tony felt that he owed something additional to his public, during this lull. He was pounding away heavily at Collucci's blubber, in close, when he looked up over Collucci's shoulder fur and explained, "we're both wops."

He punched at the heavy bag after that, practicing the leaps and high swings he'll need tomorrow night to land on Baer's jaw and then went down to his shower. There he forgot all about Baer, dismissing him contemptuously from his mind. He spoke only of his September fight with Louis—which has been promised him if he gets past the equally wordy Max.

Tony now says that he would have knocked Louis out in the first round of their fight if he weren't afraid of hurting his hands. The New York Commission wouldn't give him enough gauze and tape for his dukes, and he says he had Louis in such bad shape in the first that he felt sure he could knock him out at leisure, so there was no use hurrying the thing and risking breaking his hands.

Diffenbaugh and Keele Win Pro-Amateur at Hillendale Club

Baltimore Gets P.G.A. Qualifying

Kenwood Shoots 64; Diffenbaugh Also Wins Pro Sweeps; Burton, Dunhan 3d

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, July 1.—George Diffenbaugh was "burned" up when he played the back nine first at Hillendale today in 38 strokes so he took it out on the front nine with a three-under par 32, won the pro sweepstakes and paired with a Kenwood club member, Jack Keele, to win the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament with a best ball 64. His winning sweepstakes score was 70.

Preceding the afternoon golf the pros met and decided to hold the sectional qualifying rounds for the National P. G. A. Championship over the Five Farms course of the Baltimore Country Club, with July 26 the tentative date.

Offer Passed Up

The offer of Bobby Cruickshank and the Virginia pros to hold the event at the County Club of Virginia was passed up in favor of the Baltimore site, but as a compromise the pros of this city and Washington offered to play the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship over any Virginia course, any time, either for a purse or just for the sake of continuing the championship. It was originally scheduled for Old Point Comfort, but canceled at the last minute.

Diffenbaugh, who played in a pro-amateur at this same course a year ago this month and set a new course record of 67, was a little off his 1939 pace today, but plenty good enough as he again figured in top money in the pro-amateur and pro-sweepstakes.

George and his partners played the back nine first and the Kenwood mentor was three over par for a 38 and plenty mad over his three bogeys.

Misses a Birdie

He started the front nine by missing a short birdie putt on the first hole. He parred the next two and then dropped three birdies in four holes with a 15-foot putt on the fourth, a 4-footer on the sixth and a shorter one on the seventh for his third birdie. Meanwhile he hit a shed far to the left of the fifth green with his tee shot but chipped next to the pin for his par.

Keele was no drawback. On the back nine the long-hitting haberdasher used three handicap strokes to advantage and banged in an additional birdie on the fifteenth and their score at the ninth was 33. On the front nine, he rolled in a 3-footer for a birdie on the third that preceded his partner's streak. They were back in 31 for the 64. Keele is developing into a new sensation in the local amateur ranks, despite the fact he is just a week-end golfer.

The Kenwood team needed the 64 as Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., professional, and Dr. E. G. Schmidt, of the Bonnie View Club, posted a 65 best ball, Coffey shooting a two-over par 72 and his partner helping on seven holes. The Army and Navy team of Pro Allan Burton and Amateur Frank Dunham were third with 35-31, 66, Dunham using all his handicap strokes on the back nine. Burton was 74.

Diffenbaugh's 70 was first in the sweeps also by just one shot as the pride of Baltimore's golfers, Andy Gibson, was just one over par with a 71. Coffey's 72 was tied by Leo Fraser, who played the back nine in 32.

Pro-am scores of 67 and 68 figured in the prize list for the simonpures only, with Tony Penna and Maury Fitzgerald, Kenwood, tied at 67 with Irvin Schloss and Jesse Dowling, jr., of the host club and Leo Fraser and Erford Barnes, Rolling Road.

Hayes' Homers Help Athletics Beat Red Sox

Hits Two and Paces Mates to 9-1 Win; Rubeling Also Stars

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 1.—The high-powered slugging of Frank Hayes, All-Star game catcher, and Al Rubeling, whose combined total of seven hits went for 15 bases, enabled the Philadelphia Athletics to overwhelm the Red Sox, 9-1, in today's series opener.

Both of those A's had perfect days at bat but Hayes led the attack by knocking out two homers, a double and a single to score four runs and drive in three more. Rubeling connected for a two-bagger and a pair of singles.

While the visitors whaled Jim Bagby, jr., and Fritz Ostermueller for 15 hits, Nelson Potter kept eight Red Sox blows well scattered. Ted Williams saved the Sockers from a white-washing by tripling to right after Lou Finney singled in the third inning.

Haverford, Pa., July 1.—In a masterful performance, 22-year-old Don McNeil, of Kenyon College, defeated Joe Hunt, of the Naval Academy, today for the National Intercollegiate Tennis Championship. The score was 7—5, 6—1, 6—1.

Stanford University's Larry Dee and Jim Wade won the doubles title from the University of California's Bob Peacock and Robert Harmon in five sets, 6—3, 6—4, 3—6, 2—6, 6—2. California held the title three years straight.

McNeill's victory more than justified his top-seeded ranking in the tournament at Merion Cricket Club and gave his alma mater its first title in National college tennis.

A Brilliant Performance

Repeatedly, he lured his sturdier opponent toward the net and looped the ball over his head, or laid swift backhand drives within an eyelash of the sidelines. His forehand was no less telling.

The midshipman began to wilt under McNeill's slashing attack after the Oklahoman broke through his service in the first game of the second set. Playing his last college match, the Kenyon champion ran up a 4—0 lead before Hunt snapped back briefly. Then a service ace by McNeill and Hunt's repeated outs put the set at 5—1. Don quickly closed his advantage.

At set point, Hunt slipped and fell on the baseline. He arose with a cut knee, blood streaming down his right leg, but more shaken than injured.

A Beaten Contender

After that, Hunt was a beaten contender. He fought bravely, but McNeill's dexterity was too sure.

In the semifinals Hunt beat Defending Champion Frank Guernsey, of Rice.

The doubles final was more even. The Stanford pair looked like straight set winners with 12 games to the defenders' seven in the first two sets. Then Peacock, member of California's 1939 championship team, and his partner, Harmon, began to show some of the style that won them the National Clay Courts doubles crown a week ago.

With the match tied at two sets each, Wade and his bespectacled teammate rallied strongly and swept through the final set to the championship. The contest ended on a sour note—Harmon foot faulted with the game at advantage Stanford.

Fight Films Shipment Ban Is Rescinded

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed yesterday a bill lifting a 28-year-old prohibition against the interstate shipment of prize-fight films.

The law which banned such shipments was enacted July 31, 1912, after films showing the fight between the Negro boxer, Jack Johnson, and Jim Jefferies, had led to racial feeling.

During Congressional hearings on the repeal legislation numerous fighters, including Jack Dempsey, boxing authorities and sports writers urged its passage.

"I can't see any reason for the present ban on fight pictures," Dempsey testified. "It is only fair to the public to permit them to see what they wish to see."

He contended boxing was the greatest sport in the world, and added:

Capital to Stage Invitation Tourney

Entries for the handicap tournament close Friday, July 12 with Mrs. Fox at Wisconsin 4765. Post entries will follow the field.

Walter Pate's Squad Wins Series, 4-1, as Parker, Mulloy Win

By the United Press

Sewickley, Pa., July 1.—The Eastern tennis team selected by Capt. Walter Pate swept to a 4-to-1 victory over a youthful Western team today by capturing the two remaining singles of the annual East-West tennis team matches at Allegheny Country Club.

Frankie Parker, 24-year-old Davis Cup star from Sea Bright, N. J., and Gardnar Mulloy, of Miami Beach, Fla., eighth ranking last year, accounted for the winning matches.

Parker, who defeated Welby Van Horn, of Los Angeles, member of the Western team captained by Sam Hardy, in the first singles yesterday, added Frankie Kovacs, of San Francisco, present California champion, to his list of victims today, winning in straight sets. With the steadiness that comes from experience, Parker put away Kovacs, 6—3, 6—4, 6—1, in today's first singles, assuring victory for the East.

Van Horn Beaten

Then Mulloy, "dark horse" of the Easterners, outlasted Van Horn in the final singles to win in five sets, 3—6, 7—5, 5—7, 6—4, 7—5. Mulloy's victory was patterned after his success of yesterday, when he came from behind to beat Kovacs in five sets.

The only victory turned in by the Western team of all California players was in yesterday's doubles, when Van Horn and Jack Kramer, member of last year's Davis Cup team, beat the East doubles combination of Mulloy and Henry Prusoff, of Coral Gables, Fla., formerly of Seattle, Wash.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 1.—The Chicago Cubs suffered their fourth straight defeat today when Claude Passeau, a relief pitcher, walked Paul Waner with the bases filled in the tenth inning to give Pittsburgh a 4-3 victory. Vince DiMaggio tied the score for the Pirates with a home run off Vern Olsen in the ninth.

The homer was the ninth of the season for DiMaggio, who previously had singled, doubled and stolen a base off Ken Raffensberger, Chicago's starting pitcher.

Beck, Outsider, Falls Before Adair, 6—1, 8—6; Welsh, A. Smith, Farrin Reach Quarterfinals; Breese, Mather Default; Lynch-Mitchell Today

By Jack Munhall

To the amazement of no one the fifth annual Middle Atlantic singles championships narrowed to an all-local affair at Columbia yesterday with the third-round elimination of Baltimore's Johnny Beck, only remaining outsider.

Beck, the Monumental City's eighth-ranking player and its No. 3 Hotchkiss Cup team member, succumbed without much trouble to eighth-seeded Ralph (Buddy) Adair, Edegemoor Club entry, 6—1, 8—6. Thus evaporated for the fifth time in as many years Baltimore's hopes for a first Middle Atlantic title. Beck was the neighboring city's third strong player in two days to take a trouncing, Alex Keiles and Dever Hobbs having suffered setbacks in the second round Sunday.

Advancing with Adair into the quarter-final round yesterday were Defending Champion Barney Welsh, fourth seeded Alphonso Smith and Lieut. James Farrin, all of the Edgemoor Club, as singles matches followed a well-defined trend.

In doubles, however, there occurred one upsetting incident, the second-round default of unseeded but formidable Bill Breese and Ew Mather to Carl Fontanini and Drasavage, a team they had expected to defeat easily.

Otherwise there occurred nothing of importance in team competition, except, perhaps, the very impressive showing of third-seeded A. Smith and Murphy, who routed Frank Shore and Buddy Adair, most dangerous unseeded tandem, 6—1, 7—5, in the quarter-final round.

Welsh, seeking to retire The Washington Post Bowl by winning the tournament a third time—he won it in 1938 and 1939—continued to rout adversaries without mercy, walloping John Braggiotti, a transplanted New Yorker, 6—0, 6—1, in a match more interesting than the final scores.

Braggiotti, a slugger equipped with a fast service, stood up in face of Barney's dynamiting blasts and, though he never really had a chance with the player who hasn't lost a local tournament in ten years, he did mak eit more than a dull, lopsided proposition.

Of the other three singles winners, most impressive by far was Alphonso Smith, one-time national boys and junior doubles champion, who began a serious comeback only last season. Embellishing his eccentric looping forehand with more speed, Smith knocked off promising Charlie Freer, 6—1, 6—3, with a dispatch that presages trouble for Buddy Adair, his next opponent.

Red Wrack, Paying $9.40, Takes Feature at Charles Town

Knieriem's Racer Scores By 5 Lengths

Vender's Lien Wins Place Spoils Over Irish Moon; Daily Double Pays $125

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., July 1.—Red Wrack, never worse than second in six starts here, turned in his third victory of the meeting and brought his backers a $9.40 mutuel. The youngster of the field of six, the son of By-Pass II and Auburn, scampered to the wire five lengths ahead of the nearest opposition ahead of the nearest opposition, of the favored Waugh entry. W. R. Roberts' Irish Moon was third.

Racing in the colors of Mrs. M. Knieriem and ridden by Jockey John Hernandez, Red Wrack was clocked in 1:20 1-5 for the 6 furlongs, plus 128 feet. The slow time was due to the heavy track that resulted from a night of rain.

The Waugh entry of Vendor's Lien and Caidon made a rush to the first turn that seemed to be in keeping with the short odds on the pair. The hopes of the favorite players, however, were somewhat shattered when neither could hold the lead. Ravenhurst came up on the rail to get to the front and Red Wrack moved to the outside.

Along the backstretch, Ravenhurst and Red Wrack had the show virtually to themselves. Ravenhurst began to tire at the far turn and Hernandez drove the ultimate winner to the front. Vendor's Lien with the aid of some hard whipping, rallied mildly but too late to bother the winner. Irish Moon closed full of run but in time only for third money.

The daily double, which was made up of a long shot and a public choice, paid $125.60. It was the "8 and 4" combination. D. H. Tabler's Blue Prelude, with Tony Vesseli in the saddle, bounced on top at the start and her margin of victory was a length and a half. Overlooked in the betting she clicked with a $15.20 mutuel.

E. K. Hillman's Star Mint, with Bobby Bernhardt in the saddle, won her first race of the season when she took the third race over the seven furlong route. She was heavily supported in the betting and paid $8.40.

SMALL CHANGE set the early pace,-was rated when MOLASSES JULIA was rushed to the front, responded when shaken up and closed gamely. SUN VOTER was bothered when CIRCUS LIGHTS fell at the first turn, rallied gamely while saving ground, was blocked by tiring MOLASSES JULIA and came with a rush at the end. MOLASSES JULIA was made use of-setting the pace and stopped. DANCING CLOUD was a forward factor from the start and failed to rally. CIRCUS LIGHTS stumbled and fell at the first turn.

Selections at Charles Town.

Dear Al:

Jockey Douglas West is beginning to believe he's the hard luck kid hereabouts. He seems to figure in every spill that comes along but he has been fortunate in escaping serious injury. Jockey Joe O'Malley suffered a broken rib in that starting gate accident last week. Apprentice Jockey Bobby Erickson is visiting his parents who live here. His father, Henry Erickson, was once a top-flight rider and is now track superintendent here. R. A. Simms, owner of Pumice Stone and other horses, has been called back into the U. S. Navy, a branch he served for 21 years. Racing Secretary Fred Burton is cooking up a pair of good races for Wednesday. The feature is a $1,000 handicap at seven-eighth of a mile and has drawn Caidon, Dulie, Flag Etta, Nob, Pirate Ship and others. There's a mile and a quarter test on the same program involving Canimar, Darby Du, Blind Brook and others. Mrs. E. A. Christmas shipped Westing to Delaware Park. The Ray X. Merchant Co., of Charles Town, sent up a gallon of apple juice (not hard cider) and it really was a treat. Trainer Lou Leith is shipping seven steeplechasers from Virginia to Belair. Harold Bester, vice president of the Hagerstown track, is having his troubles trying to locate stalls for the boys. He has more horses than he knows what to do with. C. Wade has succeeded J. Kent as trainer of Mrs. M. Knieriem's Red Wrack and Blind Talk. J. E. Allison, jr., reports that he will ship R. L. Pearson's Never Idol, Tile Plate, Champfleury and Edgemont to Belair. The last two are steeplechasers. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—Smoke Gal turned in a rather dull effort last out, but seems to be the best of the eligibles in this juvenile field. Knespin could be close if 2-year-olds on the reserve list fail to see action. Arrow Lady has shown enough to be dangerous, but is a doubtful starter. The same goes for Freds First.

Second race—Regal Sun appears the best suited of these sprinters and gets a good position. I'm going to string along. Golden Key is good and has a class edge on some of the others, but is heavily weighted. Roving Eye probably is best, but promises to have an apprentice rider.

Third race—Mariyah went to her knees and got up to win in somewhat similar company. Looks like the best spot of the day. Salburne has shown enough to warrant attention. Hurdy Gurdy and Beacon Queen are possibilities on the also eligible list.

Fourth race—Rare Gem gets the right company here and needs only the right ride. Royal Veil is much better than recent efforts and will be a keen factor. Cats Cradle for the minor award.

Fifth race—Amerjee was messed about going to the turn in that last outing. Gets a better position this time and I'm going to be there. Dacotah has shown two good races and is a threat. Gold Swepe should be right there if in action.

Sixth race—Miss Wing gets in this with featherweight. Needs only to break well. Hiblaze has speed as recent tests indicate, but is on the rail for the start. Miss Maker was a star once at this short route.

Seventh race—Sea Finn is not favored by the post position, but has light weight and has had a rest. Abbot's Lark and Extra Good should be close. Chief Evergreen will be right there if the track is soft.

Eighth race—Pencader seems to have found a field that suits. The veteran likes the route and appears capable of carrying the weight. Hickory Lad has shown some closing ability. Lake Shore to take care of the others.

Substitute races—If No. 1 is used, I'll take Channing, Counter Pass and Stepping In. If No. 2 is used, I'll take Way Out, Lady Buck and Pettomar.

Best bet—Mariyah.

Fear of Price Boost Spurs Auto Sales

Current Retail Sales Discribed As Better Than Seasonal

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 1.—Describing current retail sales of motor vehicles as "decidedly better than seasonal," Ward's Automotive Reports says in its most recent issue that the "likelihood of higher prices on 1941 cars has proved a valuable factor in stimulating sales."

"The probability of such a development (a price increase) is unquestioned," it adds, "and as it is put forward by salesmen it is getting results. Prices on used cars have firmed as another result."

R. L. Polk & Co., in a tabulation of new car and truck registration for May, says that 341,791 passenger vehicles and 50,630 trucks were licensed for operation. The figures compare with 348,632 passenger and 54,831 commercial vehicles registered in April.

For the first five months of this year the tabulation showed registration of 1,487,635 passenger cars and 245,540 new trucks. The passenger car registrations were up 28.44 per cent and trucks 18.90 per cent over the comparable five months of 1939.

Hekman and Yates Reported in Line For Willkie Posts

Jackson, Mich., July 1 (AP).—The Jackson Citizen Patriot said today in a dispatch quoting "authoritative sources" in New York that Jacob Hekman and E. A. Yates have been selected as presidents of the two Commonwealth & Southern corporations formerly headed by Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential nominee.

Hekman is a former resident of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Yates was former president of the Alabama Power Co. Both are now vice presidents of the two big utility corporations.

The two corporations are the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation of New York and the Commonwealth and Southern Corporation of Delaware. The dispatch to the Citizen Patriot did not specify which corporation Hekman and Yates would head.

Hog Prices Mount After Hitting Low For Six Years

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—Four million American hog producers had a brighter outlook for their business today on reports that national pig production as decreasing and that British lard buying was increasing—indicating that the bottom of the swine price cycle had been reached.

In the last few days hog prices advanced about 25 to 40 cents per hundredweight and at a top of $5.75 reached the best level in a month.

Before this recovery hog values were the lowest in six years, having lost all of the advance as a result of war in Europe.

The British lard buying, although small compared to the big United States surplus, excited more interest among hog men than any other development because trade experts believed any revival of the Nation's export trade might be an important factor in strengthening the domestic price structure. The European war shut off much of the foreign market for lard inasmuch as Germany and Great Britain formerly were principal buyers.

Turnover Is Second Smallest in 18 Years As Stocks Ease; Food Shares Are Firm

New York, July 1.—Slightly lower prices in today's stock market indicated that the bulge of last Friday had encouraged some profit taking which was not thoroughly completed on Saturday. The feature of the session, however, was not the price movement but the extreme dullness. A turnover of 272,920 shares was the smallest for a full-five-hour session since July 3, 1939, and the second smallest in about 18 years.

Brokers ascribed the slight sell-off to profit taking for no better reason than that the day's financial news was about an even division between bullish and bearish factors. The composite average closed down 0.34 point. Food shares, the lower grade rails, oils and store stocks generally were firm. Aircrafts were soft, and most of the equipments and utilities gave up portions of their recent advances.

A sharp break in steel operations for this week was announced by the American Iron & Steel Institute but this was due entirely to the holiday this week. The decline was less than expected and with a good volume of incoming orders, the rate is expected to make up its current loss next week. The rate this week will be at 74.2 per cent of capacity compared with 86.5 per cent last week, a drop of 12.3 points. Trade reviews of the industry are optimistic but they note the softening of scrap prices.

Heaviness in the war issues was encouraged by President Roosevelt's request for steeply graduated taxes on excess profits. There were also some selling of these issues on a continuation of the peace rumors.

C. & S. Again Active

Most active stock of the day was Commonwealth & Southern with a volume of 18,700 shares. This issue, because of its relatively low quotation, frequently is in the list of active stocks and except for one big block on Friday there has been no excessive trading in it which can be traced to the nomination of Wendell Willkie. Mr. Willkie has submitted his resignation as the head of the company and intends shortly to resign from all of his other business posts.

The benefits that will come from his election are not confined to any one group of companies nor to any particular type of business. The support which is accorded him in business circles is derived from the conviction that his election will put an end to business baiting and will start the wheels of industry turning. In actual dollar value, the turnover in Commonwealth & Southern is relatively small. For instance, at today's price, transactions in it amounted to only about $28,400 against $480,000 in United States Steel, the second most active stock.

United States Steel sold off 1¼ while Bethlehem was off a small fraction and Republic was unchanged. General Motors was down nearly a point and Chrysler a small fraction. Losses of a point or more were sustained by Atchison, Peoples Gas, United Aircraft and Westinghouse. Procter & Gamble advanced a point. The great majority of price changes were fractional.

Foreign dollar bonds were unsettled in the listed market today, owing to a lack of payment of the July 1 coupon on Italian Public Credit 7s of 1952. A number of other foreign issues also were unsettled by this incident, owing to fears that the tendency to suspend payments will spread. The bond market otherwise was quiet, with gains general in both high grade and speculative obligations of domestic origin. Trading amounted to $3,450,000.

Italian Status Clouded

The situation as to Italian issues was clouded, for only two bonds had interest payments due. Although the coupon was not met on Italian Public Utilities Credit 7s, payment was made on Italian Superpower Corp. 6s. The issue that went into default fell more than 10 points. Itayian Government 7s were nearly 8 points lower, while other Italian bonds were 6 to 9 points down. German securities were dull and losses were the rule in issues of occupied countries.

United States Treasury bonds moved slowly forward, the gains in formal trading being more impressive than the more closely calculated advances of the counter market. Best grade corporate issues were mostly better, with the gains fractional.

Speculative railroad bonds were marked higher in most instances, but the variations were unimportant. Holding company and share privilege bonds were well maintained. Some specialties attracted interest, but most securities merely idled.

RFC-ICC Plan To Reorganize Rail Protested

Denver, July 1 (AP).—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation asked the United States District Court today to approve the Interstate Commerce Commission's plan for reorganization of the Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad.

Objections to the plan were filed by individuals and organizations.

The RFC, to which the railroad is indebted for loans, said in its petition that the proposed reorganization plan was "not perfect in every deail" and that it might well "strongly urge objections," but it recognized the desirability of "getting railroads out of bankruptcy" and it was not objecting "on the theory that the plan will be speedily approved and the distribution of securities will be in accordance therewith."

The railroad itself asked that the plan be returned to the I. C. C. for modification "so as to cure defects." It asked that theplan be "recast and remodelled and amended" to conform with a plan filed by the road July 28, 1936.

17% Drop Seen In Va. Pig Crop

Richmond, July 1 (AP).—The Virginia spring pig crop was estimated today at 438,000, or a decrease of 17 per cent from the 1939 crops of 525,000, and an increase of 4 per cent over the ten-year (129-38) average.

Henry M. Taylor, Federal-State agricultural statistician, in making the report, pointed out that hog production throughout the United States was declining after reaching a peak in the production cycle in 1939.

The average number of pigs saved per litten in Virginia, the report said, was only 6.0 compared with 6.4 in 1939 and the ten-year average of 6.3. The unusually cold winter and spring was given as the cause of the decrease in average number saved per litter.

Flour Buying By U. S. Buoys Wheat Prices

Other Commodities Drift Lower; Cotton Futures Uneven

By the Associated Press

Wheat cut across the general downward slant yesterday in major futures markets with a small gain.

At Chicago the breadstuff advanced ⅝ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel after recording the lowest prices in ten months. Supporting the market were Government flour purchases and storage of large amounts of new wheat for Government loans. Corn added ¼ to ¾ of a cent.

New York commodity traders paid more attention to European news, notably the new question mark of Russia's bid for more territory, and prices in most cases were allowed to drift slowly down.

Cotton closed 20 cents a bale lower to 35 higher. Early losses were about halved as trade and professional interests cushioned the market. Others ending on an uncertain price note were rubber, cottonseed oil and world sugar.

Wheat Hits Lows, Rallies

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—After dipping to lows unequaled here in the past ten months, wheat prices today rallied almost 2 cents, closing ⅝@⅞ higher than Saturday.

Lifting of hedges against flour sold to the Government Relief Agency, indicates that large qauntities of new wheat are being stored for loans and reports that two British islands in the English Channel had been occupied by Germans were factors in the rally.

After selling at 73⅜ and 73¾, new lows for the season, July and September contracts closed at 74⅞@75 and 75½@75¾, which were the highs of the session.

Corn closed ¼@¾ higher, July, 60½; September, 58@57⅞; oats, ¼@⅞ up; soy beans, ¾@1 higher; rye, 2⅛ higher, and lard ⅝ higher.

Increasing flow of new wheat to market helped to depress prices early in the session although only a small percentage apparently was being purchased by the trade and hedged in the market. The principal terminals received 5,118,000 bushels, the most for the season to date, compared with only 698,000 bushels a week ago. However, the movement is about two weeks behind a year ago. At five important wheat terminals in Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas 3,434 cars arrived compared with 1,396 a week ago and 3,128 a year ago.

December corn, representing the new crop, fell to 53¾, a new low for the season and only 4 cents higher than a year ago, but later firmed up in smypathy with strength of old crop deliveries. Favorable weather conditions for the new crop and prospects of a large carryover, accounted for most of the weakness of December. Shipping sales of 144,000 bushels of corn from here, largest in sometime, strengthened the nearby deliveries. Receipts of 468 cars consisted mostly of Government corn.

Cotton Moves Unevenly

New York, July 1 (AP).—New crop deliveries strengthened at the expense of July in the cotton market today as traders transferred from the spot month forward July lost 4 points, while other months advanced 6 to 7.

Pressure against July was aggravated by the report that close to 2,000 bales had been certificated by a leading spot house. A sharp decline attracted renewed covering by shorts and in late trade the price was bid up 11 points from the low.

At the same time, new crop deliveries, especially October and December were buoyed by purchases by spot interests against liquidating sales in July. The July premium over other months was chopped down more than 50 cents a bale.

Sugar Futures Off 2 to 3

New York, July 1 (AP).—The domestic sugar contract lost 2 to 3 points today when buyers shied away from offerings. Refiner accounts and Wall Street houses afforded some support, but this was outweighed by produce liquidation. Sales totaled 3,250 tons.

District Trade Indexes Show General Rise

Auto Registrations Up 19% in Month, Reserve Reports

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 1.—Practically all lines of business in the Fifth Federal Reserve District showed substantial improvement in May over April as well as over May last year, the Richmond Federal Reserve Bank reported today.

However, the Fifth District's trade appeared to have felt the influence of the war less than other sections of the Nation.

Department store sales were 4 per cent ahead of May, 1939; new automobile registrations rose 19 per cent, and checks drawn against depositors' accounts in 25 cities increased 16 per cent in amount.

Shipments of rayon yarn climbed 22 per cent above May a year ago, though cotton textile mills continued operations on about the same level as in March and April.

There was some improvement in employment conditions. Bituminous coal mined was three and a half times the May, 1939, production, due chiefly to a two-week shutdown last year during mine workers' negotiations with employers.

Construction also was ahead of the same month last year, and the value of building permits issued likewise showed a substantial gain. Tobacco manufacturing exceeded April but was slightly less than in May last year.

Southern Pacific Seeks 20 Engines

New York, July 1 (AP).—The Southern Pacific Co. has asked for bids on 20 Type 4-8-4 locomotives for passenger service, it was announced today.

The inquiry marked the first time this year the big carrier has entered the market for locomotives. In 1939 the company spent roughly $7,500,000 for this type equipment. The contemplated purchase is part of the normal replacement program.

Bank Loans Increase $12,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported that in 101 cities the increase in the week ended June 26 amounted to $12,000,000. This brought the total for these cities to $4,399,000,000, or $566,000,000 more than a year ago.

Int. Shoe Nets $2,891,335 in 6-Month Period

Reserve Continued For Possible Decline In Raw Materials

International Shoe Co. earned consolidated net profit in the six months ended May 31 of $2,891,335, equal to 86 cents a common share, compared with $2,824,612, or 84 cents, in the corresponding 1939 period.

The company said that "under present uncertainties it was deemed advisable to continue reserve for possible market decline in raw materials of $550,000 established November 30, 1939."

Wesson Oil & Snowdrift

Wesson Oil & Snowdrift Co. and subsidiaries reported indicated net profit for the June 1 quarter of $261,783, equal to 89 cents a share on $4 preferred stock. This compared with $379,929, or 15 cents a common share, in the preceding quarter and net loss of $972,445 in the comparable 1939 quarter. The company cut bank loans to $4,830,000 on June 1 from $10,590,000 a year ago.

Heavy Rust Damage Seen in Kansas Wheat

Chicago, July 1 (AP).—A Wichita, Kans., report to James E. Bennett & Co. today said that between Caldwell and Bluff City late wheat yields are running from only 2 to 4 bushels to the acre of 40 to 50 pound wheat.

Many farmers, after cutting one or two swaths around unusually poor fields, have pulled out to leave the grain standing. One grain man, this report said, found that from near Cunningham to Dodge City several fields had been abandoned with livestock turned into them. There were similar reports from some other localities, which the Bennett agent attributed principally to rust damage.

Holiday to Cut Steel Output To 74.2% Rate

New York, July 1 (AP).—The Nation's steel mills will curtail production schedules to 74.2 per cent of capacity this week, a decline of 12.3 points from 86.5 per cent in the preceding week, the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago the rate was 80.3 per cent of capacity and a year ago 38.5.

Steel circles said the sharp decline reflected suspension of activity for the Fourth of July holiday, a recess widely observed in the industry.

Newsom Wins, Beating Chisox

Star Allows Only 6 Hits To Win, 3-1

Holds Foes, Despite Mates Being Outhit; Rigney Is Losing Pitcher

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 1.—Louis (Buck) Newsom won his eleventh consecutive pitching victory today, holding Chicago White Sox batters to six hits and fanning seven as the Detroit Tigers won a 3-1 decision.

The big right-hander has not been charged with a mound defeat since the opening of the season.

Except in the fourth inning, when the Sox scored their only run, Newsom did not permit a single runner to pass second base. He issued only one base on balls.

Even the one Chicago run would not have scored except for an error by Dick Bartell, Detroit shortstop. After Mike Kreevich doubled, Newsom picked him off base with a throw to Bartell, who tagged the runner but dropped the ball. Kreevich moved to third on a sacrifice and scored when Moose Solters singled.

John Duncan Rigney pitched seven innings for Chicago and limited the Tigers to four hits, but he walked four batters and was charged with all the Detroit runs. Pete Appleton finished, after Rigney gave way to a pinch hitter.

Cliff Melton Defeats Bees For Giants, 7-1

By the Associated Press

New York, July 1 (AP).—Cliff Melton, one of the National League stars not chosen for the All-Star game, rang up his seventh victory of the season today as the New York Giants overpowered the Boston Bees, 7 to 1.

Melton, who has lost only one game, kept six hits scattered and struck out nine.

The Giants got only seven safeties off Al Piechota, but they included three home runs and a triple. Hank Danning, who batted in three of the victors' runs, hit his eleventh homer. Mel Ott his sixth and Tony Cuccinello his third.

Fans Likely to Pass Up Annual All-Star Game

Domination of Squads by New York, Brooklyn Players and Selection of Only 3 Hometown Boys Are Reasons; Other Choices Questioned

By the United Press

New York, July 1.—Domination of the All-Star squads by New York and Brooklyn players today seemed likely to cause a serious chill at the boxoffice when the major leaguers play their eighth annual mid-summer classic at Sportsman's Park, St. Louis, next Tuesday.

The two squads picked by the eight managers in their respective leagues show 18 of the 50 players from greater New York's three major league clubs. The Yanks placed seven men on the American League team, and the Dodgers six and the Giants five on the National League club. The St. Louis, host city, placed just three men on both teams—Johnny Mize and Terry Moore from the Cardinals on the National League club and George McQuinn, from the Browns, on the American League entry.

Odd Picking

The selection of the New York players wouldn't be so bad if they rated it. If the players are picked on 1940 performance, as they should be, then Bill Dickey and Joe Gordon don't belong and there's some question whether Charlie Keller deserves ranking ahead of Barney McCosky, of the Tigers. Dickey is hitting a mere .220 and has made only two hits in 'is last 23 times at bat. Birdie Tebbetts, of the Tigers, who's hitting .307 and doing a great job of catching, certainly belongs on the club ahead of Dickey. Don Heffner, of the Browns, and Bobby Doerr, of the Red Sox, have been playing better all-around ball than Gordon, who is hitting only .250.

Shortstop Billy Jurges, of the Giants, who is hitting only .247 and still convalescing from being struck on the head by a pitched ball, hardly deserves rating above the Bees' Eddie Miller, who's hitting .305 and playing stellar ball in the field. Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager, who considers himself the third-string shortstop on his own club hardly deserves a berth. Whit Wyatt, with a 7-and-6 record, is a questionable choice. And how could they pass up Dixie Walker, who's clouting .344 for the Dodgers? Or is Dixie's American League service enough to blackball him?

Why Not Radcliff

Another notable absentee from the American League team is Ray Radcliff, of the Browns, who's hitting .365. His record of 34 runs clouted in compares favorably with DiMaggio (38), Keller (38), Cramer (23), and Finney (31), some of the men picked.

On the basis of the men picked, the American League seems to have a definite edge both offensively and defensively. The American League squad has a combined batting average of .294, has driven in 645 runs and hit 124 homers as compared with the National League's batting average of .293, 554 runs batted in and 89 homers. In pitching the American Leaguers have scored 55 victories and lost 29 times as compared with 52 victories and 41 defeats for the National Leaguers.

Yanks Defeat Nats, Who Fall Into Cellar

but Ruffing was permitting nothing more than a double—and only two of those—while the Yanks were hitting for considerable distance against Chase's fast ball.

Washington began to extend its losing streak to three games in the third inning. In the first, the Yanks filled the bases on a pair of walks and Travis' error, but Chase fanned Keller and Selkirk, and Gordon obligingly flied out to Gelbert. In the second, the Yanks had runners on third and second with none out, but Chase escaped damage there.

They caught up with him in the third, however. Specifically, it was DiMaggio who caught up with him. After Keller opened the inning by bouncing a two-bagger off the centerfield wall, DiMaggio bounced his twelfth home run of the season into the centerfield bleachers. Two more runs crossed the plate before Chase could get 'em out. He hit Selkirk on the elbow pitched a scratch hit to Gordon and then after a sacrifice Dahlgren doubled off the rightfield wall.

By the fifth it was 5-0, what with Rosar tripling into the centerfield corner, and in the sixth Keller beat out a bunt to Bonura, according to Umpire Rue, and two runs followed. Gelbert muffed DiMaggio's double play grounder, a sacrifice moved the runners along, Gordon got one run home with an infield out, and Chase moved the second across the plate with a wild pitch.

The Yanks scored their last run very simply. George Selkirk merely hit a ball over the rightfield wall with two out in the eighth for his ninth homer of the season.

D. C. Cricket Team Suffers Its First Defeat, 111 to 65

After eight straight victories, the Washington Cricket Club yesterday was brooding over its first defeat of the season—a 111-to-65 loss Sunday to the Tennyson Club of Philadelphia, at the Langley Park estate of Col. H. McCormick-Goodhart, of the British Embassy here.

The local cricketers were heading for their first undefeated season in years until running head-first into the bowling of Tennyson's Munn and Broadhurst.

Manager Harold Bennett, given to outbursts of 60 runs at a time, was limited to a meager 5. E. Evans, with 23 runs, was the Washington Club's high man.

Black Marlin Reported In Chesapeake

Game Fishermen May Have Wishes Filled In Coming Season

By the Associated Press

Crisfield, Md., July 1.—Game fish sportsmen descend in droves at likely spots off Maryland's coast each year hoping to land a marlin.

Capt. Wallace Evans, a resident of Smiths Island and one of the State's better known watermen, reported finding a "black" marlin on the bay shore side of the island, between Church Creek and Fog Point.

Captain Evans said that from its appearance he thought it had been killed by another of its kind, since there was a wound in its side. The fish measured eight feet, eight inches in length.

From time to time, expert fishermen have reported losing hook, line and sinker to large and vicious fish in the bay. They have ventured the opinion that it easily could be marlin.

Washingtonian Lands 89-Pound Tuna

Ocean City, Md., July 1 (AP).—Landing of an 89-pound tuna by Bob Wilson, of Washington, indicated today that the big game fishing season here is about to begin.

Boyd Stops Foe In Tenth Round

Referee Harry Volkman raised Boyd's hand, but it was Hassett who received the larger ovation—an ovation for a courageous stand against superior odds.

Danny had carried the battle to Boyd the greater part of the time and had an ugly "mouse" swelling each of the slightly paunchy Boyd's eyes.

Until the last part of the sixth, when Boyd drove three pile-driving lefts into Hassett's nose, Danny was leading by a round. The Post score sheet called the second and fifth rounds even, gave the third, fourth and seventh to Hassett and the remainder to Boyd. Hassett weighed 182½, Boyd, 189.

The eight-round semifinal developed into a "battle of stumblebums" with Billy Bullock, 134½, and Carl Guggino, 137, both of Washington, fighting to a draw. Guggino had been a 2-to-1 favorite to win his eleventh straight.

Bullock led in the number of stumbles, taking six spills during the business to three for Guggino. Both boys bulled each other all over the ring, and it was anybody's fight right up to the final bell.

In a six rounder that held much spectator-interest Billy Banks, 129½, of Washington, took a unanimous decision over Texas Jackie Carter, 135¾. Jackie had a slight edge midway the fight, but Billy kept busy in the late going while Jackie "dogged" it. The decision was far from popular.

Gilbert Mayo, of Alexandria, and Vince Truminello, of Baltimore, both 127, fought a rousing four round draw in what was the second professional fight for each boy. Both were staggered once by left hooks and both ended up with left eyes starting to close.

The four round opener ended after two minutes, 45 seconds of fighting when Oscar Wright, 138, colored, knocked down Buddy Moore, 136, for the fifth time and was awarded a technical knockout.

Man of the Month

The Man of the Month contest is sponsored jointly by The Washington Post and Station WJSV. Following each of the Nats' games, Arch McDonald will award points to Washington players as he deems performances merit. The Man of the Month will be presented with a $50 merchandise order by The Post.

Station WJSV Baseball Broadcaster

Cecil Travis and Buddy Myer move into the lead on the first of July's Man of the Month contest. Points on the basis of yesterday's game were distributed as follows:

To Travis, five points, because he made two of the Nats' hits including a double, drove in a run and played a brilliant game in the eld despite his error.

To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he contributed a single and double to the Nats' attack.

To Johnny Welaj, two points, because he opened the ninth with a pinch-hit single. The totals:

Cecil Travis	5	Zeke Bonura	2
Buddy Myer	3	Johnny Welaj	2

Undertakers Sue To Regain Use Of Phone Numbers

Charles S. Zurhorst, Inc., undertakers at 301 East Capitol street since 1857, filed suit in the District Court yesterday to regain two telephone numbers the firm claims to have had for more than 40 years.

The Zurhorst firm, in a complaint sworn to by its secretary, Henry P. Thomas, charged that Ralph T. Flanagan quit as manager June 20, effective June 30, after ordering the firm's telephone numbers relisted under the name of Flanagan's own establishment at 201 Twenty-first street northeast.

The complaint said the firm's telephone numbers have been advertised for many years and that it gets 95 per cent of its business by telephone.

The complaint said that the change has resulted in the calls intended for the Zurhorst firm being diverted to Flanagan's place.

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. was named as codefendant.

"I sometimes play for two or three weeks without holding a single interesting hand," he begins, "but last week I had at least four which I enjoy recalling. This is one of them.

"My exceptional heart hand left no doubt in what suit it would finally be played. Therefore I could afford my fake informatory double, which had the hoped-for result. East figured that I had a well-distributed hand and because of my partner's bids of spades and diamonds, West was supposed to have a lot of hearts. Therefore East, with his high card tricks, thought a double was in order.

"West led the jack of clubs as his only chance to lead through possible strength in the dummy. East took the ace and king of clubs and instead of collecting the ace of spades, played a third club. Now I spread my hand and claimed the rest of the tricks.

"It was obvious that East held the ace of spades and the king of diamonds and therefore after innumerable rounds of trumps, East either had to blank the king of diamonds or to discard the ace of spades, in which case the queen in my hand would become good. I therefore not only made by redoubled contract, but also an overtrick."

Listen! with Slocum

The business of getting up in the middle of the night to go to work will become extremely easy for Arthur Godfrey, now. For Saturday Arthur became a father. It was a boy, born at 4:30 in the morning, and the first word it uttered was "Zlotnick." Mrs. Godfrey is doing very well, and things have reached the point around WJSV where Arthur has begun to walk on the floors again instead of the ceiling.

The little lad will be named Arthur Godfrey, jr. As a junior of long standing I advised Arthur very strongly against naming his son junior, but he claims that Mrs. Godfrey wants it so. I personally can see no reason why she should have anything to say about it, inasmuch as Arthur is the father and we all thought we'd lose him at one point last month.

I feel for the little one even now. When he grows up he will spend all his time hearing people say, "Oh, you——well your old man got me out of bed every morning for fifteen years when I was in the Government. Go away."

PHILADELPHIA ECHOES—Albert Warner, standing in hotel lobbies listening patiently to campaign managers proving beyond any question of a doubt that Taft Dewey, Vandenberg, or Willkie would win . . . John Charles Daly's extraordinary footwork when he was broadcasting from the middle of the Willkie demonstration and the New York delegation started a free-for-all fight . . . no Galento is Mr. Daly

Ben Turpin, 71, Cross-Eyed Comedian, Dies

Made First Picture With Charlie Chaplin More Than 25 Years Ago

By the Associated Press

Hollywood, July 1.—Ben Turpin, the funny little guy with the crossed eyes who always maintained he could do a "108" better than anybody else, died today.

TURPIN

A "108" is a somersault from a standing still start. Ben made such somersaults, and himself, famous because he didn't come out of them on his feet as others did. He always fell on his face or his head or some other unconventional part of his wiry body.

He was 71, although kindly biographers through the years always made him six years younger.

Ben started in the movies more than a quarter of a century ago, at the old Essanay studio in Chicago. He had been in burlesque and vaudeville when Bronco Billy Anderson began making pictures. Ben's first film starred Charlie Chaplin. Charlie knocked Ben all over the studio with two-by fours. And props weren't made of balsa wood in those days, either.

Ben came West about 1914 and soon he was working in Mack Sennett's Keystone Comedies.

Little is known about Mrs. Turpin; she stayed in the background.

Ben appeared in good health last year, when he was in "Hollywood Cavalcade," but his physician said today he had been suffering from asthma for several years. He suffered a stroke Sunday afternoon and died early today.

Turpin was born in 1869 in New Orleans and began acting in the window of his father's candy store, where he pulled taffy. He amused customers that he decided he would be an actor and so he took off for Chicago. He was very busy, until 10 years ago, when he quit except for occasional brief movie bits.

Paul D. Cravath, Lawyer, Sponsor Of Opera, Dies

Locust Valley, N. Y., July 1 (AP).—Paul D. Cravath, 78, chairman of the board of the Metropolitan Opera Company and for many years one of New York's outstanding corporation lawyers, died at his home here today.

Cravath's firm for years represented J. P. Morgan & Co. and other important banking and business corporations. He was a graduate of Oberlin College and an honor graduate of the Columbia Law School. Charles Evans Hughes was one of his associates in his early legal career.

In 1917 President Wilson made him a member of the mission headed by Col. E. M. House, sent abroad to represent this country at an inter-Allied conference regarding the conduct of the war.

Death Takes Pat McKenna, 65, Doorkeeper to the President

Death came to "Pat" McKenna, who was 65, exactly 37 years after President Theodore Roosevelt brought him to the White House from an Oyster Bay yacht club, where he first caught T. R.'s attention.

A friend of seven Presidents, countless politicians and diplomats who dropped in at the White House, McKenna served under two Roosevelts, Taft, Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and Hoover. He is survived by his wife.

"Because I have always thought of Pat McKenna as one of my oldest personal friends, I am grieved and shocked by his death. I have known him since the Administration of President Wilson, and finding him here in March, 1933, meant much toward making the task of the Presidency more easy.

"Nobody can ever quite replace him. On the door of many Presidents, he had come to know almost everybody who called at the executive offices during all these years.

"But this was more than a mere knowledge of faces—he knew the personal characteristics of practically everyone prominent in public life during the past 40 years. He was a shrewd judge of character and because he and I were such really good friends, he was able to help me on many occasions and in many ways during all these years.

Only Sunday, when it appeared that McKenna's illness was serious, the President had written him a note in longhand, ending:

"Come back soon. I need you."

But Pat did not come back. And yesterday old friends at the White House mourned his passing.

Rudolph Forster, chief clerk, was so affected by McKenna's death that he could not receive visitors. They had been intimate friends for many years.

District Commissioner John Russell Young, for many years a newspaper correspondent at the White House, said in a statement:

"I am shocked and saddened by the death of Pat McKenna. I had known him for more than 20 years and during all that period I admired his tact and fine courtesy, a courtesy dictated by kindness of heart and thoughtful consideration of the feelings of others. Few men in Washington had a more extensive acquaintance. He will be widely mourned and sincerely missed."

"What goes on inside the White House is the personal affair of the man who lives there," he used to say, "and I tell no tales out of school."

When President Roosevelt sailed to Buenos Aires for a Pan-American Conference in 1936, he invited Pat to come along. But the little Irishman had to decline the invitation at the last moment, because of the illness of his sister.

"There once was a holiday called the 4th of July and every year people were in such a hurry to enjoy this holiday that they jumped into their cars and rushed out to bump into other cars and turn each other over and run off of mountains and hit each other sideways until one year there were so many people in cars doing so many things they shouldn't have, that when the 4th of July was over and it was time for people to come back from the country and the mountains and the seashore there was nobody to come at all . . . . . and I discovered that I alone had lived to tell the tale!"

This 4th of July week end will be the longest in many years THURSDAY TO MONDAY which means that auto accidents will probably be the highest in many years. Care and courtesy could cut these accidents in half. Let's try.
